as second-class matter. BIAS-EYED BUTLER.

Some years ago, when that brilliant became so rightously indignant at old attempts to humiliate the down-trod- man in the country: dea people of the South that in a burst of the most withering sarcasm he said: all that is pusillanimous in war, inhu man in peace, forbidding in morals Butlerism." An apter specimen of word-portraiture it would be difficult. manhood he issued his notorious and infamous order insulting the ladies of entire South he proved his claims to the brave Kentuckian's characteriza-

a difficult task to find a negro slave political merchandise. who would have been guilty of such an unpardonable offence against gentler sex. Even among these ebony sons there was a gallantry caught from their masters that lifted them into an atmosphere of chivalrous sentimen hybrid's reach.

Because Ben Butler is a Northern man, because he was a Federal soldier, because he was a radical politician of the dirtiest type the men of the South do not hate him, but because next to their God they love and honor the mothers who bore them they hate with an unmitigated and unmitigating come at last. hatred this lecherous old libel upon American manhood who slimes through life as the wanton insulter of woman. In this unenviable character he stands alone in the solitude of his infamy.

This man of brutal instincts, during the war, when engaged in his famous Dutch Gap enterprise, subjected captured Confederates to the fire of their own guns in order to force Gen. Lee to cease firing that he might complete his work. With characteristic meanness he sought to take advantage of the humane feelings of our "brave and gentle Lee." It is to be hoped that there is no Southern man so lost to honor as to do him reverence. If so, let him be anathema maranatha.

Between Blaine and Butler no gallant gentleman will hesitate. As much as the South despises dishonesty it infinitely prefers a monumental thief to a shameless insulter of women and a heartless tyrant.

The St. Louis Republican announced the arrival in that city last week of Mrs. J. S. Hammond, of Dollas, Texas. Mrs. Hammond is a native of the Valley of Virginia, and as Belle Boyd, the Confederate Spy, was well known in that section. The Republican adds:at the close of the war Belle Boyd was married to Col. John S. Hammond, an ex-Confederate officer. A few years ago the Hammonds removed to Dallas, Texas, and Hammond to a prominent position with Bradstreet's Commercial Agency. The famous Belle Boyd had almost dropped from the minds of the public until brought forth on the 3d day of August by the announcement through the Republican SOZODONT. that Hammond had created an intense sensation on the streets of Dallas by phosphates for corn and potatoes on assaulting Mr. Ray Shepherd, a young | heavy wet soils. lawyer of that town, charging him with undue familiarity with his wife. A Little Rock dispatch states that complete reports received from all parts of Arkansas are to the effect that the cotton crop is coming forward rapidly and that the aggregate yield will reach 1,000,000 bales. This enormous yield will be 300,000 bales in excess of any previous season in the history of the State, and one-seventh of the average production of the entire country. In the eyent of early frost the above estihas already begun and will be general in ten days. There is a demand for labor, and planters are paying sixty to seventy-five cents per 100 pounds. Along the Arkansas and White Rivers, in the vicinity of Bayon Bartholomew, the crop is particularly fine, tar exceeding the expectations of producers, who feared a short crop owing to continued rainfall at the beginning of .he season. The crop is two weeks backward as compared with last year.
