intered at the Postoffice at Wilmington, N. C. as second-class matter.

Throughout Europe the wheat crop. on the average, is excellent, and India has a large exportable surplus. The English crop is ten above the hundred average. That of Ireland will be reaped from a largely decreased acreage.-The prices are the lowest within a century, so that the English farmers are despondent over a big crop. The French prices have dropped five cents a bushel within a tortnight The same tendency exists throughout Europe. Wheat from the fields of Northern Russia is offered on the Baltic at ninetytwo cents a bushel. The European crops of hay and rye are very short. Hops are a little below the average Of maize an enormous yield is reported, there being 1,800,000,000 bushels.

The New York Herald and the New of the election in Vermont and see in esteem. it signs of the victory to be achieved by the Democrats in November. The Herald says:

The shrinkage of the Republican vote in Vermont yesterday, as compared with the September election of 1880, appears to be in a proportion which will assure the election of Governor Cleveland to the Presidency by a great majority in the electoral college, if it is repeated throughout the Northern States. There is reason for confidence that it will not merely be repeated but greatly exceeded.

It is manifest that several thousand Vermont Republicans have withheld their votes even from a respectable State ticket in September to signify their reprobation of their party's Presidential nomination. When November comes and the Presidential ticket of Blaine and Logan is directly in issue at the polls it safe to look for a still more vigorous expression of public opposi-

And this is from the World:

There is nothing discouraging to Democracy in the result of the election in Vermont yesterday. Vermont is the rock-ribbed, granite-based fortress of Republicanism. It is the Gibraltar of the party. Its population is fixed, its prejudices are ingrained and there is little or no political change in Vermont. But the election shows that even in Vermont there is a desire for CHANGE and Administrative Reform

Four years ago, at the Gubernatorial election, the Republicans had a plurality of 26,603. Judging from the returns received from yesterday's election the plurality this year will not exceed 21,000. The stay-at-home Republican vote seems to have been unusually large. In a number of towns the Democrats and Independents secured local victories. The Republicans in sevenal districts were routed for the first time in the history of their party and the Democrats gain largely in the Legislature. The coolness of Senator Edmunds towards Blaine seems to have spread over the mountains and descended into the valleys.

It is gratifying to know that in Stalwart Vermont there is a desire for a Take the hint if you want to enjoy your change and a purification of the Gov- dinner. ernment which the "magnetism" of Blaine cannot deflect. To stir up any sort of Republican revolt in Vermont is a victory for the friends of Reform.
