Four years later Blaine's friends in Maine discovered, to their great astonishment, that when he assured them that he was putting them into "a good thing on the ground floor" he was deceiving them. He had received a large commission for disposing of the Little Rock bonds to them, and they reasoned that if they had dealt directly with Fisher they might have secured for their money not only the bonds which were delivered to them, but a much larger bonus of stocks and bonds --

They could see why Blaine so promptly repaid to them the money and took back the securities .-"Some of them," wrote a correspondent of the Springfield Republican in, a remarkable history of Blaine's career published in 1880, "get together once in a while and talk the matter over, and it is not difficult for them to understand why it was that Mr. Blaine was willing to get down on his knees to Mr. Mulligan to implore him not to make lic." They were "satisfied" that when Blaine declared that he had paid for the bonds "at precisely the same rate others paid," he had deliberately said what was not true. One of them remarked to that correspondent: "He has never opened his mouth about the matter since. He lied to me, and he
