HONESTY THEONLY ISSUE.

At an early stage of the canvass, says the Herald, we called attention to the fact that one of the inevitable consequences of the nomination of Blaine by the Republicans and Cleveland by the Democtats would be the formation of new party lines; that the character and potorious career of the Republican candidate had presented a new issue to the country which would disintegrate the Republican party, and that the Democrats had met that issue by mak ing a nomination suited to the need. In the progress of events this fact has become so clear that even the Blaine men see it and comment upon it, but do not seem to understand its full sig-

With any distinguished Republican of good repute standing as the candidate of the Republican party, and Mr. Cleveland or another as the Democratic candidate, the issues of the canyass would have been points of party conduct and theories of party policy; but with the name of Blaine on the Republican banners all distinctly political concanvass as the laws of the Medes and gists. Persians. Public conceptions of propriety, the public instinct of decency in party concerns, the public chagrin and disgust at the discovery that one of the great political parties believes the country is indifferent as to the honesty of public officials—these are ouches the national sensibility, and give-away." touches only to offend it. That such a A silent partner is one who is exnomination should make havoe with the harmony of the Republican party was to be expected; but even the politithat havoc would be. I didn't feel but very little pain ' vantage of it. They thought the time had come for a general scramble and wanted to control the conditions of the scramble; but the fact that about onethird or one-half the Republican vote Importunate youth-"Why, you know, in several large States will entirely repudiate Blaine shows that the party was not so bad as its opponents and Blaine's friends thought it. Such a stampede from party lines as we are to have this year has never before been seen in this country, and that stampede will be due to latent Republican

But there is a characteristic difference between the two parties in the disintegration that the nominations have brought about. Blaine's name drives away from the Republican party nearly all the honesty and upright purpose that has hitherto adhered to it. Every man who was a Republican because he believed that that party could be more safely trusted with the government than any other was forced to change tha' opinion when Blaine was nominated, since that nomination clearly showed that the Blaine elements were dominant, and no such man would care to be responsible for what they might do. The party that loses all its conscientious voters loses the element that has saved it for a time from public execration! And while the Republicans have lost through Blaine nearly all that a party should desire to keep, the Democrats have, through the nomination of Cleveland, been freed from the burdens taken, acting promptly, relieving and the reproach of a sociation with quickly, 25 cts. In the sympathy of certain Democrats for Blaine we see exhibited on a larger scale only the happy harmony between men of different parties that constituted Tweed's ring system, while in the consent of all fair-minded Democrats and all men of good will in the Republican party to act together against Blaine we see evidence of the popular purpose to force the issue of honesty in govern-

Hon. S. J. Randall asserted positively week ago that Pennsylvania will go for Cleveland in November, and on the heels of this we find the following in the World:
