FADED ROSE LEAVES AND A LETTER.

Faded rose leaves and a letter! What do they tell of the past? Life's enjoyments, like the flowers. Cannot tresh forever last! And my tears fall as I'm gazing On the faded tokens there Of a love to which I listen'd In the bygone ages fair.

Faded rose leaves! still retaining, Thro' the vanished year's sad gloom, Something of your vanished beauty, Something of your sweet perfume. can see the face that o'er you.

Bent, its weight of love to bide; can hear the low voice breathing Vows to me, his promised bride.

Faded rose leaves and a letter! Ah, me! I can say no more, For the dream with all its beauties, All its tenderness, is o'er. I had used to sketch the picture. Colors far too bright to last. And I hold within my fingers But the relics of the past!

Jackson's power tion of a Democratic State administra-of self control was wonderful. One tion, and which has been unbroken for day a warm friend and admirer venturwould move on the following day.
"Can you keep a secret, sir?" "Yes, sir," said the gentleman, supposing he was about to obtain the desired inforifested in every part of the State. And mation. "Then sir," retorted Jackson, "so can I." On another occasion the army entered Winchester, Va., for the purpose, as was believed by Jackson's military family, of taking up winter quarters there. A house was actually engaged for the winter for the Gen eral's headquarters. Before day break was left in Winchester. Gen. Jackson's relations toward Gen. Lee were those of implicit confidence and trust. When on one occasion the latter chided him for coming to his (Lee's) headquarters in a snow-storm in obedience to a request from Lee, which the latter had not intended to be interpreted so literally, Jackson simply bent his head and said : "Any word from Geo. Lee is a law to me."
