OUR WASHINGTON LETTER. (Sp. Cor. Daily Review.) WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 30, '88. The hotel contests for the honor (and emolument) of entertaining the President-elect during the brief interval between his arrival in the city and his induction into office seems to have been decided in favor of the Arlington, which, as you know, is just across the park that fronts the White House. Rumor has it that the publicans have been standing, but in hand, much like the dozen barbers by their empty chairs, when you call for a shave at an off hour, all ready to welcome and serve the great dispenser of patronage. We are likewise informed that the great question as to how he will get here has also been settled, and the rivalry of the anxious railroad magnates has subsided. Thank heaven!

The daily press (weekly also) teems with important information in regard to the inauguration ceremony, which are to be on the grandest possible scale. The notes of preparation are heard on all hands—largely bank notes, of course, about $50,000 having been subscribed for the purpose—and everybody and his wife are to be here. A ponderous general committee, and even so many sub-committees, have been appointed, and the chairman in chief, who is the head of a successful law firm here, and a quiet, clever gentleman withal, has made a "Colonel" by the papers, and even a "General" on the occasion of his late visit to the home of the elect at Indianapolis, with Chairman Quay, which is not "key," as you might suppose, but as pronounced would rhyme with "dray." The visit was important, and the elevation to the rank of General quite right, though he returned in his (newspaper) colonelcy when he got back.

The volunteer soldiers all over the North and West are arranging to come; between 5,000 and 10,000 have already secured quarters. All the regulars, or, as we boys would have called them, the "true and true soldiers," within easy reach, and probably the cadets from West Point and Annapolis will be ordered on. Triumphant arches will span the street. The houses along the line of march are to be decorated, music will fill the air, and at night a grand illumination and ball. In short, as they say in Duplin, "the big pot is to be put in the little one," and a loud, merry time is expected by everybody.

There is no doubt that all that money can procure will be had. They estimate the cost at $100,000. But the weather will be a large element in the success of the program, and that is very capricious about that time of the year. The almanac used by the farmers in the neighborhood has been consulted, and fair weather is promised for the three first days of March, but the 4th is to be "variable." Well, politicians have to content themselves with what the gods provide, and the committee proclaim that there will be no postponement on account of the weather.

Gen. Grant was inaugurated in a spell of weather that made life a burden to those who had to be out in it. Cold?—well, I should say so, I viewed the procession from a comfortable room, but it made the heart ache to look at the shivering soldiers in line. The grand ball was given in an immense frame structure erected for it. Tickets $20. The supper was cooked in New York, and I would like to tell you how many tons of solid matter it comprised, but your readers might not believe me. The coffee was the only thing that came upon the table hot and that had to be taken in its scalding condition or it got cold. The meats were frozen stiff and couldn't be cut, and the butter required a mallet and chisel. Steam heaters had been put in, but they made no more impression on the room than a lighted tar barrel at Dry Pond would on a promenade on Market street. Seats had been prepared for 10,000 or more and the 1,000 men and women were lost in it; and then nobody wanted to sit down; one had to keep moving to keep from freezing. Two monster brass bands occupied the galleries in the two ends of the room and they blew and pounded with all their might in a vain endeavor to keep warm and entertain the audience; but their grand music fell upon unappreciative ears. The coat rooms were a failure. The few who left their overcoats on arriving were glad to get them back again. Women with décolleté gowns, of beautiful fabrics, didn't hesitate to hide them and their beautiful or bony shoulders beneath the homely wrap. Overcoats and furs were more precious than diamonds and every one seemed to regret that he hadn't worn a coal stove as a breast plate.

The night before Garfield was inaugurated I saw visiting soldiers' clubs marching up the street at a thunder and lightning storm. The day was sloping gradually cold, though many were warmer than on the other day referred to. However, and was inaugurated on the 4th of March that day. The snow had nearly all melted from the streets and the sun shone out bright and beautiful and overcoats were not needed until late in the evening. So a pleasant day for the grand pageant is a possibility, but very uncertain, and it would have been wise, I think, to have yielded to the largely expressed desire and changed the time to a day a month or two later. However, we are assured by the committee that the picnic shall go on, rain or shine, and we can only hope for the best. I intended making allusion to some circumstances attending the later life and inauguration of Gen. Garfield, that, in the mind of the superstitious, seemed to point to the sad incident that brought his administration to a sudden and melancholy close, but I find I've exhausted my space and must leave that for a future letter. Capt. F. M. James reports seven interments in Oak Grove Cemetery during the month of December, two adults and five children. Two of the seven were white.

The work of laying the stone pavement on North Front street is progressing rapidly and as soon as it is completed to the depot we hope that something in that line may be done for Market street.

The Coroner's Jury. The verdict of the Coroner's jury, in the inquest held yesterday afternoon on the body of the dead sailor, William Weston, was as follows: "William Weston came to his death on the 30th day of December A. D. 1888, from a blow inflicted on the right of his head by Charles Wessell." Wessell waived examination and was admitted to bail in the sum of $2,000. His lawyers are Hon. D. L. Russell and Mr. Marsden Bellamy.

Rock Crystal Spectacles and Eyeglasses. Advice to old and young: In selecting spectacles you should be cautious not to take more magnifying power than has been lost to the eye as in the same proportion that you pass that point of increase, will cause you further injury to the eye. Using glasses of stronger power than is necessary is the daily cause of premature old age to the sight. You can get the best at Heinsberger's.

The Work Begun. The work of building the trestle across the Sound, from the Hummocks to the beach, for the Ocean View R. R., is under way. Mr. R. P. Bowdoin has the contract and he says that he will have the bridge completed and the iron laid in five weeks, with good weather.

Annual Reception. The annual banquet and reception of the Harmony Circle Club was held last night at Harmony Hall. It was largely attended, the floor being one blaze of beauty and light. Dancing was in order and it was kept up with rare enjoyment until the small hours of the morning. It was one of the most pleasant events of the season, and at 12 o'clock, just as the old year sped out of sight and the young one loomed into view the guests all assembled to a sumptuous repast. The occasion will be long remembered, at least until it is eclipsed by the annual assemblage on December 31st, 1889.

Belford's Magazine. The January number of this excellent magazine, which is edited by Donn Piatt, is at hand. It is a beautiful number, with a fine miscellaneous of contents. A complete novel, "The Lion's Share," by Mrs. Clark Waring, is published in this issue. There are besides many fine papers that would of themselves fill the pages of an ordinary monthly. Among these may be named, Wicked Legislation; The Honors of an Election; Andy's Gift; Front the Windows of a Great Library; The Root of the Spoils System; Uncle Scipio; The Results (Nov. 6 1888); Silk Culture, and Is Marriage a Failure? The editorial departments are complete. Published by Belford, Clarke & Co., 384 Broadway, at $2.50 a year.

Knights of Pythias. The regular semi annual election of officers of Stonewall Lodge No. 1, K. of P., was held last night. The Book Reception. Bear in mind the reception which is to be held at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association on Friday evening next. Each one who attends is requested to present a book to the library. A musical and literary programme has been arranged and refreshments will be served. Doors open at 7:30 p. m. Messrs. J. H. Boatwright, W. R. Kingsbury and A. J. Marsball form the committee of arrangements.

Le Roi Est Mort Vive le Roi! Germania Hall was full last night of those who had assembled there to part with the old year and welcome the new. It was a large and brilliant assemblage and was perfect in every respect. The ball was given under the auspices of Germania Lodge No. 4, K. of P., but there were a good many present besides the members of that lodge. The old year was danced out and the new year was danced in. This is as it should be. Part kindly with the old and greet as kindly the new and do the same for 89 and 90 as has been done for 88 and 89.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS. Notice.

THE SEMI-ANNUAL INTEREST ON THE first mortgage bonds of the Wilmington Sea Coast Railroad Company, maturing January 1st, 1889, will be paid at the office of the Wilmington Savings and Trust Company, 168 Princess street, on and after January 2, 1889. H. M. BOWDEN, Secretary and Treasurer.

A Happy and Prosperous New Year

We thank one and all of our patrons and friends for their liberal patronage during the year just closed, and assure them that no pains on our part will be spared to still further merit their confidence.

We are constantly adding the latest production from the Type Foundry, but have not thought it necessary to speak of every new font of Type we buy, preferring to let our competitors, who occasionally make a small investment for new material, do the blowing; they invariably copy our styles, and endeavor in every way to duplicate us, becoming mere imitators.

We purpose increasing our facilities during the year, and can safely handle any work offered us. JACKSON & BELL.

Stockholders' Meeting.
