Decidedly Seasonable.

Capt. Styron, of the schooner Samuel, while boarding his vessel this morning at Messrs. Hall & Pearsall's wharf, lost his footing and fell overboard. The Captain was carrying an arm full of vegetables, which went over with him. When he came up, to the surprise of the bystanders, he coolly began collecting the floating turnips, &c., with one hand and grasping a line which time, trouble and expense. For sale had been thrown with the other, pulled himself out on the wharf again. Going aboard he soon donned dry clothes and appeared none the worse for his cool plunge.

To Work on the River.

Capt. J. H. Williams and Mr. L. M. Hewlett, Engineer, will leave here to-night for Elizabeth City, where they will take charge of the steam tug Stetson and dredge, belonging to the Atlas Dredging Company. They will take the boat to Norfolk, through the Dismal Swamp Canal, where some necessary repairs will be made to her. As soon as three weeks' time, the tug will re turn to Elizabeth City and take the dredge in tow and bring her to this city where she will be used in work on the lower Cape Fear, under the Atlas Company's contract with the government.
