Another American express company, the United States Express, has just organized itself for work in Europe, with agencies in London Paris, and elsewhere, and will commence about April 1st. It is impos sible, however, to establish an ex press service in Europe on the Amer ican plan. The parcel post, with its wonderful cheap rates and efficient service, would crowd the enterpris ing expressman out of the field. Instead of jamming parcels into mail bags and squeezing them out of shape, as in America, the parcel post is a separate department, has separate post wagons, and pack things in large baskets, in which they are transported without danger and so
