By the breaking of the dam to a reservoir, two and a half miles northeast of the town. the pent up waters were let loose and an apparling loss of life was the result. The latest estimate is that 4,000 lives were lost and property to the amount of $11,000,000 was destroyed. Entire towns were washed, so that scarcely a vestige of them remains. Every house in the vicinity which has been left standing is a charnel house in which the drowned have been temporarily placed. Death and destruction is on every hand and it seems as if the wrath of God had doomed the peace-
