WILMINGTON, N. C.

MONDAY, FEB. 17, 1890.

Entered at the Postoffice at Wilmington, N.C., as second-class matter.

There was a large gathering of representative men from the North, East and West at Atlanta on Thursday at the Chamber of Commerce banquet. Hon. W. E. Russell, of Massachusetts, made a very handsome address and spoke most eloquently of the new South and feelingly of the late Henry W. Grady. Mr. Russell said:

"I know the sorrow," said he, "that pervades this meeting. I feel the thought in every mind. A friend, a leader, a statesman and patriot has gone. With matchless eloquence and the manly frankness of a noble soul he proclaimed the undying loyalty of 70,000,000 people to our common country, to all her institutions and to all her laws; and then he asked forbearance, sympathy and aid while the new South adjusted the past to the present, and solved those momentous problems vital to her, vital to all, and gave his life to the discharge of this patriotic duty."

"North and South mingle their tears at his loss, gather inspiration from his life, and join hearts and hands in worthy perpetuating his memory. To me has been given the sad and yet pleasant duty of bringing from the Young Men's Democratic Club of Massachusetts its contribution to his monument as its tribute to his memory. His patriotic purpose, political convictions and progressive spirit represented as truly the 6,000 young progressive Democrats of that club as it did his own beloved State of Georgia."

"With wonderful energy and courage the South entered upon her new life. How well she has lived it, how much, how vastly much she has accomplished, you, gentlemen of Atlanta, from the experience of this great and growing city, you can tell better than any words of mine. Education has advanced with every increasing strides, and with equal pace, justice, thrift, morality and respect for law, and last but not least, free labor and personal liberty have been demonstrated to be the key to industrial and commercial prosperity. Upon those principles North and South stand now thoroughly reunited."

"Many evils of the War have been cured—and all have been cured that tended to divide the country by sectional prejudice upon sectional lines. Faneuil Hall, since the War, has uttered her indignant and non-partisan protest against the use of National power in the State of Louisiana. The old Cradle of Liberty spoke then the sentiments of Massachusetts, just as she would speak it to-day against any National invasion of State rights or State duties, whether that power comes bearing gifts or with force of arms."

"There may be still some aged non-combatants in Massachusetts, as there may in Georgia, who cling to old prejudices and would like now to fight the War. But a new generation has come upon the field, intensely loyal to the result of the War, gathering inspiration from the patriotism and brave deeds of the past, but absolutely uninfluenced by any other prejudices. This is a young influence, guided by the present and not the past, who believe that in and between all sections there should be loyalty, fraternity and charity. It is too late to speak of sectional feeling when Southern soldiers have placed their garlands on Bunker Hill and the veterans North and South have met again on the old battlefield in friendship and in love and exchanged the trophies of war. Sectionalism as a constant threatening peril and disturbing force has gone forever."

"The War is over in both North and South. Its benefits are permanent; its evils can be remedied. That is the duty of to-day—easy to accomplish, and a new South, reunited in love and loyalty. Not for generations has there been so little to provide, so much to unite the North and South, and, reunited, so much for them to do. As our fathers so bravely met the duties of their day, so let us, unfettered by the past, bravely meet the duties of our day, seeking only truth, justice, liberty, the welfare, honor and progress of our beloved country."

"Oh! where shall rest be found?" The worn-out mother sighs; Stockings to mend, and trousers to darn. Dishes to wash, and butter to churn. While my back feels to break, and head and heart burn. And life is a constant friction. The summer came and went. The matron no longer sighs; Elastic her step, and rounded her cheek. Work seems but play, life is now sweet. And the change was made in one short week.

By Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Positive remedy for those derangements, irregularities, and weaknesses so common to womankind.

A Man of Mark.

Prince Mailetunka, of the Friendly Islands, in the Pacific Ocean, is, by all accounts, the most elaborately decorated potentate in the world. His body is tattooed from top to toe, and bears over 13,000 different signs of emblems on its surface. Although hitherto unknown to fame, either as a warrior or diplomat, the hereditary ruler of the Friendly group must be admitted to be a man of mark. His only rival, as far as history records it, is the Hon. Phineas T. Barnum's once widely renowned star attraction, the Tattooed Greek. And the Tattooed Greek was only a pirate, not a prince.

Experience is demonstrating that the best way to check the evils of intemperance in this country is not by prohibitory, total abstinence law, but by a system of high license. The achievements of the Brooks High License Bill in Pennsylvania would seem to fortify reasonable reformers in such conclusion. It is officially ascertained in Philadelphia that it has drawn out of the liquor business a vast number of men who have been found by the License Court unfit to be trusted in the sale of liquor, and those questioning its beneficial influence should study the figures of the last three years. In 1888, in that city, there were 3,429 applications for retail licenses. Only 1,343 were granted. In 1889 there were 3,214 applications, 1,204 of which were granted. For the year 1890 the number of applicants has fallen to 2,921. Quite a different story is told of licenses to wholesale dealers. There were 475 applications in 1888, of which 395 were granted. The applicants increased in number to 640 in 1889, and, under the ruling of the Supreme Court, 537 obtained licenses. Since then it has been decided that there is nothing in the law to prevent customers from drinking liquor on the premises, and for this year there are 1,272 applicants for wholesale licenses. They will not get through as a matter of course, however, if remonstrances are filed against them, and the Law and Order Society is expected to attend to that part of the business.

Electric Bitters.

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise. Will drive Malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all Malarial fevers. For cure of Headache, Constipation and Indigestion try Electric Bitters. Entire satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded. Price 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle at Robert R. Bellamy's wholesale and retail drug store.

FEBRUARY FUN.

The earth is the Lord's but the streets belong to the street railway companies.—[Cleveland Lender.

Republicans were ever ungrateful. We put our great men on postage stamps and then punch their heads.—[Puck.

If grown men only knew as much as their mothers think they know when they are babies the world would have no further use for cyclopedias.—[Somerville Journal.

Clara (patronizingly)—"It is a good plan for a person in society, to try at least to look wise." Debutante—"True! But don't you sometimes find it hard to do so?"—[Drake's Magazine.

Head clerk—"I'm letting my whiskers grow, sir." "So I see; but I can't permit employees to grow their whiskers in business hours. That must be done in their own time."—[Toronto Grip.

Proud farther—"Heavens! What a passion for the sea my son Siegfried has. Last evening he went to the naval ball; afterwards he was seasick and now—he is eating raw clams."—[Fliegende Blaetter.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced."
