According to M. Duchesne, railroad men improve in health during the first four 'years, but at the end of ten yeers they are tired out, in fifteen they are actual sufferers, and few can remain in the service after twenty. These general conclusions have been supplemented by Dr. Lichteyberg, of Buda-Pesth, who found from examination that out of two hundred and fifty railroad em ployees ninety-two, or more than a third, suffered from ear disease. Engine drivers are especially liable to rheumatism and pneumonia, and after some years of service a certain portion of them become dull of sight and hearing. Others suffer from a mild form of spinal concussion, muscular feebleness and continuous pains in the limbs. They are apt to develop a peculiar mental state-a sort of cerebral irritation-with excessive nervousness and morbid sensation of fear.
