Mr. Blaine's reciprocity letter is a mine of nuggets for the tariff reformer. It is good protectionist doctrine that the effect of a tariff is to cheapen everything, and it is as equally sound protectionism to affirm that all duties are paid by the exporter and not by the consumer. Mr. Blaine does not believe in either of these doctrines. This is what he says: "Nearly all the articles we export to our neighbors are subject to heavy customs taxes; so heavy, in many cases, as to prohibit their con-sumption by the masses of the peo-take Lemon Elixir.

For loss of appetite and debility, take Lemon Elixir. ple." If this does not mean that the effect of a tariff is to increase cost of articles to the consumer, it has no meaning at all. This is a good tariff-reform doctrine confirmed by torpid or diseased liver, stomach, high protection authority.

The down-hearted American farmer, plundered by tariff monopo- druggists. lists and condemned to sell cheap and buy dear, may obtain a ray of comfort in the announcement that The old adage of an ill wind that blows nobody any good has a forcible application in this instance, and what is John Bull's loss ought to prove Brother Jonathan's gain. Unfortunately our foreign customers, barred out by the high tariff laws from selling us things we need, buy only so much of our products as they need, whereas, if there were a fair measure of reciprocity, we might find a paying market at many points where now the gates of trade are either closed to us or held jeal-

The announcement that the French assassin Eyraud has been safely lodged in prison in Paris puts an end to the apprehensions that he would either make his escape on the way from Cuba to France or succeed in taking his life, as he attempted to do in his cell in Havana. Eyraud's crime was a sensational one, and his escape and capture form an exciting chapter in the annals of the French police. His victim, Gouffe, was a well-to-do notary Gouffe became infatuated with a woman named Gabriel'e Bompard, who sustained relations with Eyraud. The latter possesses hands of unusual size and power. Having ascertained from Gabrielle that It numbers among its correspondents many of the very best writers of the Southern Presbyterian Church. It is thoroughly orthodox on questions of doctrine, but free and outspoken in its views on all open questions. It shows and invites free discussion within the bounds of courters. visit (tabrielle at a certain hour, and repaired without any misgiv. ings to the fatal rendezvous. Eyraud was secreted in the room. At a favorable moment he sprang upon his victim while he was seated, con versing unsuspiciously with Gabrielle, seized him by the throat and choked him to death. He then hastened to Gouffe's house, rifled his desk and, having secreted his victim's body, fled. The disappearance of Gouffe caused an investigation the Yerba Santa from Spain. VON GRAFF TROCHEE CO., Free ed, but Eyraud could not be found He had made his way to this country, and subsequently went to Havana. Here he was recognized by a Frenchman and taken into custody by the Cuban police. After his arrest he attempted to commit suicide by opening a vein with a fragment of one of his eye-glasses, and so desperate was his behavior that it was feared that he would never be taken to France alive. The French detectives sent out for him, also gives a clear, concise, and interesting account of the Ottoman Empire, from its foundation to the present day.
