The Republicans now have a maprits of fourteen in the Senate. All of the talk, therefore, about the Democrats being able to control that body is simply silly twaddle.

The Charleston News and Courier estimates the majority in the next family is his baby brother, a few House at 153. Curiously enough, sensly, distels colds, head the 242 Democrats are equally divided, 121 from the North and 121 from the South.

> The Republicans will still fight under the same old flag-high protection and big prices. Mr. Harrison is now preparing his message and it is said that there will be no back-down on the McKinley bill. The Democrats could ask for nothing better.

Kansas gave 82,000 majority to Harrison and now has elected a Democratic Governor. In 1888 she sent seven Republican Representatives to Congress. In the next Congress the delegation will be five Democrats and two Republicans. The farmers did it.

The Democracy, remarks the Philadelphia Record, put brains into the late contest. Their opponents re'ied mainly on spot cash. This makes the outcome more inspiring. It is a new proof that the people sometimes take time to think, and that they are not corrupt.

"Oh, for a Lodge in some vast wilderness," sighs Henry Cabot, the anthor of the infamous Force bill, and who pulled through the other day with a loss of four-fifths of his former majority. H. His Satanic Majesty.

The next attraction at the Opera House will be the appearance of Miss Rose Osborne, on Thursday evening in a thrilling melo-drama entitled "Satan." Miss Osborne has a fine reputation. She was leading lady with C. B. Bishop and starred for two years in Bartley Campbell's famous troupe. She played in Danville, Va., last Thurs day night and so heartily were the people of that city pleased with her that she was tendered a reception by leading citizens of that place. At the Opera House Las Night.

There was a large audience and fine entertainment at the Opera House last night. "A Legal Wrong" is a thrilling, realistic drama of today, with a stirring plot, lively movements and exciting climaxes. The company is a fairly good one: not the best, it is true, but a fairly good average. Miss Rose Wilder, as Helen Wilton, was very good, as well in the make up of the character as in its impersonation; Mr. Jas. F. Green, as Murty McNally, was just splendid and became a prime favorite with the audience before he had been five minutes on the stage, and Miss Lillie Durham, the soubrette, was charming. The music and dancing specialties were very fine and the scenery was excellent. The company go hence to Raleigh where they should be greeted with a large house.

An invitation has been sent to Senator Vance to be present and deliver an address on the occasion and the committee is awaiting a reply from him before appointing a date for the celebration.

He Will Join the Rechabites.

He lives in a house on Chinquepin street, one of twins and hard to tell apart on a dark night and especially when the brain is addled. He took a little too much last night and as his underpinning was weak some of his friends took him home in a carriage, found, as they supposed, the right house, opened the door and shoved him in. He entered the parlor and disrobed, down to his ensanguined garments, when the lady of the house, hearing a noise, entered and found him seated in a chair and fast asleep. She may be pardoned for taking him for a veritable Mephistopheles, for in the dim light he looked just such as is sometimes represented on the stage, minus the hoofs and candle appendage. The lady was alone in the house, as her husband, who works till late every night, had not yet returned. Frightened almost out of her wits she ran creaming from the house and met her husband on his way home. The convival gentleman was found by the husband in the same chair and in the same attitude and the same carmineous attire. With some difficulty he was made aware of his fix and was assisted into his nether garments and escorted to his proper domicile next door. There was a sick man and a sad man and a sorry man under that roof this norning. He swears now that he will never be green enough to get drunk again, even if the House should go 1,500 majority instead of a paultry 150.
