VOL. XV.

WILMINGTON, N. C., FRIDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1890.

NO. 6.

PLEASE NOTICE
We will be glad to receive communications from our friends on any and all subjects of general interest, but the name of the writer must always be furnished to the Editor. Communications must be written on only one side of the paper. Personalities must be avoided. And it is especially and particularly understood that the Editor does not always endorse the views of correspondents unless so stated in the editorial columns.

Twenty-two inches of snow is reported from Harrisburg, W. Va. It is the heaviest snow storm they have had there since 1857.

Shake! Kaiser. It's a boy, born Wednesday night, and it is no wonder that the young Emperor William left the opera house in a hurry when the news was carried to him there.

Sitting Bull's death seems to have been the subject for active hostilities in the West. It is known now that the hostiles are on the war-path and have already had collisions with the whites.

Senator Gorman's elegant residence near Laurel, Howard county, Md., was burned on Wednesday night in the midst of a furious rain storm and his wife and daughter barely escaped with their lives and in their night robes.

The Wisconsin State Grange at its recent meeting resolved that the rate of interest should be reduced to such an extent that the money lender should not receive for the use of his money a greater interest than the farmer receives upon his investment of capital and labor. The rate of interest the Grange resolved should not, at the outside, go above 5 per cent.

The Rev. C. H. Lovejoy, who desires to be Chaplain of the next Kansas House, was chaplain of the Topeka Legislature, and in his opening prayer set forth the free State side of the question at such length that Col. H. Miles Moore said it "was the first complete statement of Kansas affairs that had ever been made to the Almighty."

Snee's fast will end to-morrow night, if he holds out until then. He lost 40 pounds on Wednesday, the 42d day of his long abstinence. On the same day he swallowed 41 ounces of ice and water. There was a big, fat man who dropped in every day to see the faster and the Herald reports that he worried Succid dreadfully, as was perfectly natural, by the way. He remarked at one time that "de faat jon-tel-man seet dair to on-rage me," and again, "I no lak me dat jon-tel-man as he to noot look atta me."

Can you not see the strangeness of his altered countenance with what a majesty he bears himself. Why, don't you know? He had rheumatism ten years and looked an old and broken man but he used Salvation Oil and got well.

The visitors from Mt. Airy leave for home this evening. They left so much snow and cold weather behind them and found so much sunshine here that they were looking all about yesterday for orange trees and palm-trees, and low fountains that gush forth in the midst of roses.

Woodard was Captain of the Hemenways and Master Jacob S. Allen commanded the Unions.

Notes From Thomasville.

A friend at Thomasville in this State writes us a very pleasant and congratulatory letter apropos of the Review's fourteen years of existence and also conveying some news from his locality. We copy briefly some portions of his letter. He says:

Let me tender my congratulations on the anniversary of the DAILY REVIEW. For fourteen years it has been a steady and unflinching exponent of true Democracy and your trumpet has never given forth an uncertain sound. May you go on with renewed success and may both editor and paper live to a ripe old age.

We are all still taking railroad here. Many are the inquiries made in these parts as to what the Richmond & Danville people mean by building a road from Salisbury to Norwood, in Stanly county. It is true that at Norwood they will strike a fine farming section, but will the business justify the expenditure? If they contemplate ever extending beyond Norwood it might take all the Richmond & Danville surplus to carry it anywhere from that place, so broken is the country in that section.

We have a big snow storm here. It is said to have been the heaviest for 25 years. It commenced to fall about 4 o'clock this morning and it has been coming down continuously for six hours. Had it not been for the heavy rain in the early part of the day we would have had two feet of snow here now on a dead level. Long live the DAILY REVIEW. T.

Cleopatra.

Miss Marie Prescott is said to have herself written the dramatization of Haggard's Cleopatra, in which she will appear at the Opera House to-morrow night with Mr. McLean, both of them sustained by a good company. In the play there is abundant material for tragic interest. A highly emotional drama has been the result of the playwright's efforts. The scenes are somewhat different in the play from the book. The first shows the secret crowning of Harnachis in the temple; the second the encounter between Harnachis and Cleopatra in the streets of Alexandria, in which he slays the royal guard in a hand-to-hand contest and is taken by Cleopatra among her retainers. Act the second shows the chamber of Cleopatra, where Harnachis has been brought to read the stars for the queen; being unaccustomed to such scenes of beauty as he comes upon her he falls in love with the queen, and when she relates to him her misfortunes, actually, though sworn to kill her, becomes her friend. The third act develops the character of Charmion and ends in the contest between Cleopatra and Harnachis, when he comes to kill her, and is, in the end, bewitched by her, and reveals to her the secret of the Pyramids and their wealth. The fourth act shows Cleopatra reveling with Antony on the banks of the Cyndus, while poor Harnachis is in her train of slaves. When the queen consents to become the wife of Antony Harnachis is unable any longer to restrain himself, but bursts in upon them, exposing her wantonness, drags her to the foot of the throne, tears the crown from her head and places it upon his own. In the last act we see Harnachis in prison whence he escapes through the aid of Charmion; after twelve years he returns, skilled in medicine, and passes as Olympos; he obtains access to Cleopatra as her physician, and when Antony is brought to her dead, furnishes her poison with which she kills herself; then he returns to the temple and is killed by the priests as a sacrifice, dying with his love for Cleopatra unchanged and with her name on his lips.

"Alas! alas! I've lost a day" he said so despairingly, that I naturally inquired how it happened. "Well, you see," he said, "I've been half dead with a cold, and didn't know until to-day that I could cure it with one bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup."

Wilmington & Onslow Railroad.

Aldermen Montgomery, Smith and Craft, the special committee to whom was referred the petition of the Wilmington, Onslow & East Carolina Railroad Company, asking for right of way along South Front street, from Kidder to Dawson street, and thence along Surry to Castle; and, also, that Surry street be opened on its southern extension from Queen to Dawson street, met last evening in the Mayor's office at the City Hall, to hear what opponents and friends of the petition had to say about the matter.

There were twenty-five or thirty gentlemen in all present, representing the Wilmington Cotton Mills, the railroad company, the Carolina Oil & Creosote Works, and Messrs. S. & W. H. Northrop, Mr. George W. Kidder, Mr. W. L. Smith, Mr. M. Cronly and others.

Col. Waddell, attorney for the railroad company, said the amended petition asked for the right of way on Surry street to Castle (instead of Church street).

Mr. DuB. Cutlar stated the case. The company asked for two things—the privilege of running up Front street to Dawson, and thence, cutting across the property of the Cotton Mills to Surry, to run along that street to Castle; and, second, to open up Surry street. He explained the powers of the city in regard to the streets, which he said had all been originally donated by the owners of lands through which the street ran. The railroad company had the right to condemn lands for the road under the laws of the State, but this matter the city had nothing to do with. Whether the city should open Surry street is another matter. He thought there was very little to discuss except the privilege of Front street.

Mr. W. A. French, in behalf of the Wilmington Cotton Mills, said the matter of right of way through their property and the opening up of Surry street had been sprung upon them without notice and in the absence of their counsel from the city; the company did not want the street opened; it would injure their property; a cut of at least five feet in depth would have to be made through it; besides, the smoke from passing engines would damage the goods made at the factory, and fine bleached goods which they were now preparing to manufacture; they had already suffered in this particular from smoke from adjacent manufactories. Mr. Geo. R. French and Mr. Donald McRae also gave reasons why Surry street should not be opened. Mr. McRae thought that a cut of twenty feet in depth instead of five feet would be required for the road.

Mr. George R. French called attention to the fact that the railroad company had already the right in their charter of running the road on Queen street.

Col. Waddell said the question raised was as to some private property; but all the committee had to consider was the granting of the privilege on the streets. He claimed that Surry street was already virtually opened. The railroad company had already bought the Van Bokkelen property at the foot of Queen street, and wished to reach it. He combated the idea that the railroad would injure the products of the mill; but it did not lie in their mouths to protest when they (the mill owners) had offered to sell the right of way to the company. But this was altogether a private matter. The question for the committee was whether there was any outcry against granting the privilege on the streets asked by the company. The railroad company was prepared to pay private property owners all the law required, for the privileges it asked.

Mr. D. McRae said that the Gas Company were opposed to the road running its tracks to Castle street, and would, if necessary, petition against it.

After further expressions of opinion pro and con., the committee rose and the gentlemen present took
