IRON INDUSTRY.

THE MORNING STAR has frequently directed attention to the iron producing capacity of the State of North Carolina. The fullest information at tainable in regard to the subject has been laid before our readers from time to time, for we have always regarded it as a matter of prime importance. The iron produced in North Carolina is of the very best quality and is largely diffused through different sections of the State. It is not our present purpose to recapitulate these localities and the efforts that are making to develop this great resource.

A Southern contemporary presents some figures, borrowed from letters and statements which it has seen showing the great advantage of iron manufacture in the South over the North. The cost of making a ton of pig metal in Pittsburg, as shown by one of the papers of that city, in $25 02; while the cost of making a ton of metal of the same quality at Camberland Works, Tennessee, in cluding the cost of transportation, is only $16, making a difference of $5 per ton in favor of Southern iron. This profit on 30,000 tons a year would be very handsome.

Mr. Lothian Bell, the great iron man of the world, stated on his return from a visit to the United States, in an address to the British Iron and Steel Institute, that "Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia could produce iron at a little over half the cost in the North-Pennsylvania-and as cheap as the most favored localities in Great Britain." Not only is this iron cheap, but it is also of the finest quality. An iron manufacturer, in a letter written to the Putsburg Review, state that "the iron from Philadelphia and Tennessee has , brough in Philadelphia sixty three dollars a ton, and gave,

The road-bed from Old Fort to Malone's Store, the Mayor informs us, is now ready ploma. for the three miles of iron generously promised by our citizens. This iron, we learn, has already been shipped at Philadelphia for this port, but has not yet arrived. The freight receipts on this road for November and December of the year just closed, he says, shows an increase of $2,100 over the same period for the year previous.
