

MORTON'S GOOD-NIGHT SONG, AS SUNG BY THE CANADIANA GLEE CLUB.

O, Chandler, I am here now, I do not care to be blown; Just pour some camphor on my brow, And turn the gas down very low; O Chandler, dear, the game is up, I hear the mighty Tilden-treads, Now stir some nerve in my cup, And put me in my little bed.

Do you remember, Chandler dear, You said we must wake up the war? We've overtook the mark I fear, And crushed the business quite too far; The fighting men have left our ranks, With Hooker, Sigel, Farnsworth, Corse, We've only Butler, Schenck, and Banks, And they have gone from bad to worse.

O drop the curtains, Chandler dear, The bonnet make my eyeballs ache, And stuff some cotton in each ear, Those victory notes my heart will break. An awful ghost is in my room, With horrid blue jeans breeches on, I see the shadow in the gloom, Oh! bid the haunting thing begone.

Come, Chandler, come, bid me good night, I hear the mighty Tilden-treads, They've whipped us fairly in the fight, So put me in my little bed.

Specimen from Florida. [Special dispatch to the Baltimore Sun.] New York, Nov. 10.

The following dispatch was received by Hon. A. S. Hewitt at Democratic headquarters to-day. Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 10.—I send you for publication, as indicating the mode in which the election has been conducted by the Republicans in this State, the following, just received from the Chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee:

Monticello, Fla., Nov. 8.—To Col. J. M. Daniel, J. H. Paine, Esq., and J. M. Baker, Esq.—Dear Sir:—The election here yesterday was a disgrace to our civilization. Our challengees were excluded from the polls, notwithstanding a written agreement to admit them, and they were unable to hold their positions at the windows. Six hundred more votes were cast than there are voters in the county, by official and our party census, which do not materially disagree. They overran us with fraudulent votes while our challengees were excluded. Intimidation was practised to such an extent as to deter our colored Democrats from voting with us. The women were worst. Will send you some astounding details when I have time to write. The mail is now leaving. Yours, very truly, S. Pasco.

In this county and elsewhere the jails were opened, and the inmates brought to the polls and voted solidly Republican. Notwithstanding these and similar facts, Florida has gone Democratic on both State and national tickets. Nothing but gross frauds in the canvass can deprive us of the result. The latest returns strengthen this conviction.

J. J. DANIEL, Chairman Democratic Executive Committee, Second Congressional District, Florida.

No Ku-Kluxing the Election. [New York Herald.] One of the parties in Florida sends a report that the other party has "wrecked a train and Ku-Kluxed the election returns." The report is probably untrue, but the phrase is well-used. It reminds us to tell the politicians of both parties that the people will stand no Ku-Kluxing of election returns this time. They mean to have peace and fair play. If the Democrats have carried Louisiana the people will not allow Governor Kellogg and Mr. Backard, with a too convenient Returning Board, to Ku-Klux the vote. They were allowed to do it in 1872, so far as the result had only a local importance; but the Senate refused to admit the Senator elected by their fraud. They did it again in 1874, but public opinion forced a Republican Congress to condemn the fraud in the most positive and conspicuous manner by unseating some of the members of the Legislature who were Ku-Kluxed in the Returning Board. We beg the New Orleans Republican managers to remember that their previous frauds are well known here in the North, and that as men already detected and exposed in Ku-Kluxing election returns they have need to be conspicuously fair and upright this time. All their acts and proceedings will be watched with the most jealous eyes by honorable men of both parties in the North, and they should remember that the presumption lies fairly against them, because they have already been detected in the same trick of which they are now suspected.

No, too, in South Carolina, we warn the adherents of Governor Chamberlain against attempting to Ku-Klux the election returns. They cannot hope to succeed, for they will be exposed, and their own party in the North will disown them. It is very well understood here that the South Carolina election machinery has been constituted in a suspiciously unfair and partisan manner. Judge Mackay, of the Supreme Court of the State, himself a Hayes Republican, but opposed to corruption, has exposed the manner in which Governor Chamberlain arranged for the count of the vote. There is a Board of State Canvassers, the majority of whose members are candidates on the same ticket with Chamberlain, and are thus, by a monstrous perversion of fair dealing, allowed to canvass and decide upon the votes of the State, and declare whether they themselves are elected; and not only this, but of the ninety-six Commissioners of Election in the county seventy are Chamberlain's declared partisans and forty are office-holders who hold their places by his appointment.

The excitement in this city, despite the gloomy and rainy weather, is unabated. The crowd remained until midnight around the newspaper offices and respective political headquarters, cheering at each bulletin.

The Republican National Committee at the Fifth Avenue Hotel held secret sessions, positively refusing admission, while the proprietors of the hotel stationed policemen and employes at the door, with instructions to admit only guests. These orders were rigidly enforced, but large numbers of well-known Federal office holders and Republican politicians thronged the corridors, discussing the situation from a constitutional point of view, and expounding the ways and means in the event of a contested presidential election.

The announcement in the city that General Logan, the political soldier, is on his way South, is received with many marks of sarcasm and disapprobation. He is accompanied by Garfield, Kelley, and others.

General Grant's letter in regard to an honest counting of the vote in the Southern States produced a good impression among fair-minded men of both parties. Unfortunately the selection made by him, and announced during the evening, of persons to go South to watch the counting of votes, nullified the effect of his good words. Logan is such an intense partisan that even prominent Republicans here expressed surprise at Grant's selection of him, while Garfield and Kelley are regarded here as not quite so unscrupulous, if not so blatant partisans.

The rooms at the Everett House, the Democratic headquarters, were crowded during the evening by a number of Democratic leaders from all parts of the country.
