THE MISREPRESENTING SENATOR

Considering that the moneyed kings have had it pretty much their own way so long in this country, the strength developed by the "silver lunatics" is something remarkable.

Lamar, Ben Hill, and Butler, of South Carolina, all men of excellent parts, the first two especially, have not been able to see the matter as all of the leading men of the South have seen it, and hence they vote and speak against their friends and constituents.

Mr. Hill's position is somewhat eccentric. He will vote for the coinage of silver dollars, but he will also vote to deprive the silver dollars of their money value.

Mr. Hill's position is thus commented on by the Savannah News: "He is willing that the people shall have a limited amount of silver with a limited legal tender."

But Sherman is mistaken. He counts this time without his host. The people of this country understand him, and understand the true character of the Returning Board.

to their cars, while he would break it to their hope. Mr. Hill's renunciation of silver, with Mr. Hill's restrictions and limitations, reminds us of the anxious mother's admission to her wayward daughter.

What Mr. Hayes has written or caused to be written is not, certainly known. There are several versions of the forthcoming letter, if it ever forthcoming. This much is probably true: the President has so far yielded to the evil influences of John Sherman, the Mephistophiles of the Cabinet, as to write a letter of remonstrance to Gov. Nichols, and to lay the matter before Attorney General Devens, who appears to keep his head better than the other members of the Cabinet.

Just here, we wish to say parenthetically, that the Democratic members who are in favor of reducing the army have an additional argument in the demonstration of Sherman and his set. We see how ready such fellows, and their name is legion, are to use the army for bad and wicked purposes—how swift they are to fly to the bayonet to bolster up a sinking cause or to shield political "pals" who are no corrupter than they are.

We trust that the President will not be betrayed farther into an attempt to shield the Louisiana thieves. He cannot play the role that Grant attempted so successfully, for he has not the vim and the will, if he has the ambition and the "unscrupulousness."

Mr. Whitaker succeeded him in office, he found that there was $1,300,000 represented by certified gold checks, drawn upon the First National Bank of New Orleans. The bank was solvent and Mr. Whitaker received for these checks as if cash.

The speech of Hon. Alex. H. Stephens on the occasion of the presentation of the Carpenter debt was a very noble one. It contained some impressive and eloquent passages, and coming from the Vice President of the Southern Confederacy is very remarkable.

The New York State penitentiary cost above earnings in 1876, $704,379.85. This is what some of the people of New York.

The people of Currituck, North Carolina, deserve praise for their humanity. They are frequently called upon to aid those in deep distress, and with some exceptions they respond with liberality and kindness.

On closer examination, Sherman's protest proves to be a tissue of falsehoods from beginning to end. First, the grand jury did not refuse to indict Anderson, but directed the Attorney General to institute the prosecution.

The vote on the silver bill has not been taken in the Senate. The silver bill, as amended, renounces silver and makes it equal with gold as a legal tender, but free coinage is stricken out.

Ben Hill called the Bland bill the "Pickpocket bill" and immediately the Golden-Calf idolaters all bowed down before Ben, and cry out: "Well named, we thank thee, thou man of the South."

The President has nothing under heaven to do with the administration of justice in Louisiana. Whether Anderson and Wells are tried or not the President can have no concern for it is none of his business.

The plea set up that Anderson is a very, very innocent man, and the victim of political persecution, appears very thin under the great fraud calcium light that can be seen across an entire continent.

The conviction of Anderson and of the entire board is a foregone conclusion, and nothing can save them if they are tried in the State Court. It makes no difference what the law and what the evidence may be, the public prejudice, aided by the manipulation of our State law in regarding a jury, makes conviction certain.

The Charlotte Observer commences nearly one hundred years of paper monthly. It is a good paper, with a good local editor, who is evidently a live man.

The Raleigh News: We are glad to learn that the railroads from Egypt to Genoa are progressing rapidly. Sixty-one miles have already been completed, and the whole number (100) allowed by the Act of the Legislature will soon be finished.
