[Harvard Lampoon.] THE SPIDER AND THE PLY.

As told, sub rosa, on the Yacht America, by Gener Butler to his son.

Come hither, now, my little son, and look me in the eye; You may be shocked to find it cocked, but kindly pass that by, And listen to the story of the Spider and

A cunning spider made a web, and when the web was spun Hard-fisted flies came loafing up to view it in the sun: "That spider must be awful smart !" exclaimed most every one. "O ! working flies !" the spider said, "O ! horny-handed flies !"

Don't listen to the other bugs, they'll only tell you lies; But choose me for your governor-you will if you are wise.

"I'll show you how to spoil the ants, those sober-minded flats; To circumvent the butterflies, those proud aristocrats;

Destroy the busy bees, and put a head upon the gnats. "Hurrah !" cried out the little flies, "let's make him governor, With him around to give advice, we won' be caught no more By sticky papers on the shelves or traps

"O ! spider," said a captious fly, "I hear you run a yacht. While we are poor that won't go down. Exclaimed the spider, "Rot! I sold it last year to my son. Excuse me, I "Say, spider," said a doubting fly, as filthy "' Is said that you invest the funds you held as a trustee In lecherous bonds. That will not wash with insects such as we."

"O ! flies," the spider said, and wiped a tear drop from his eye, "How many foes a spider has! That yarn is all a lie !"

"Of course it is !" exclaimed the swarm,

and squelched the doubting fly Some honest money-bugs, who tried the little flies to tell That spite of all his specious way the spider was a sell.

Were styled by a blaspheming fly as "slimy imps of bell !" "You lop-eared pelicans," went on this Kearnal-minded fly,

"You educated bilks, get out !" And all the Of buzzers clapped their horny bands, and said, "How's that for high ?"

All round about the web they danced, and when the day was done bleaching in the sun. "Sold !" cried the spider. "What a gag !

Sold! every son of a gun!" I am that spider, little son; the workingman's a fly.

Just follow me, and you will go to heaven when you die; For though my optic's cocked, my son, there's no green in my eye.

The Demagogue. [Reidsville Times.]

Whether it was Gov. Vance or not, anyway the Governor tells the following in his lecture on the Demagogue. Judge Kerr relates it with tine effect. The politician saw in the crowd a tall, dignified looking gentleman, who looked like a man of weight and influence in his neighborhood. He at once approached him and began conversation. Dignified gent asked politician what were his religious leanings.

"Ah! well, sir," (sharply eyeing the old gent) "my father was a Lutheran." (Here a pause. No effect on the old gent.) "My mother is a Methodist." (Still no effect.) "My wife is a Presbyterian." (Not a bit.) "I confess that for the Episcopalians I have high regard, the intelligence and refinement to be found in their wedded to no other faith than that of this paper is on an average of which is buried with Christ in baptism !"

(Old gent spasmodically seizing politician's hands with both of his.) "God bless you, sir! You are right! you are right, you are right, sir!" And he took him on home to stay all But the funniest they tell on Gen.

Leach. They say the General was canvassing and came across a man standing in the road by his wagon. "Why, howdy do! howdy do!"

sir, you are looking remarkably well." The man looked at Leach as if he wasn't certain whether he had ever met him before or not.

"By the way," continued the General, "I was thinking of you the other day; I wanted to send you some documents; please just give me your address, and tell me how you spell your name," and he took out his pencil to write it down.

"Any darn fool can spell my name," said the man,"I spell it, P-e-r Per r-y ry Perry."

"Exactly," said Leach, "you see there is a family of Perrys in my county that spell their name Perr.e.y." And that settled it.

It Was Ex-Gov. Hendricks who Laid

the Plan. [New York World.]

Mr. Hendricks laid out the late campaign in Indiana, which was so successful. In the canvass, which is described as the most thorough ever organized, young men were largely enlisted. A correspondent says: "Governor Hendricks, who suggested this infusion of young blood into the conduct of the campaign two years ago, did not neglect to inspire it with fresh life this year. In his composition there is an uncommon sympathy for young men. It is as if in the loss of his only son he had adopted the youth of Indiana, for his devotion is not confined to the young men of his own party."

The Alamo, New Orleans Picavune.

A venerable Mexican, named Reigido Guerro, residing in San Antonio, applied last week for a pension from the State of Texas, on the plea that he is the only male survivor of the Alamo massacre, of those who were in the building when it was captured by Santa Anna's troops and the heroic defenders put to the sword. It has always been believed in Texasand we have heard the tragic story of the Alamo told by men who lost relatives there, and who helped to defeat Santa Anna afterwards at San Jacinto-that there was no male in the fortress who escaped death except a doctor, and he was wounded. Quite a men of prominence, residing in Texas when her war of independence commenced, joined the Texans and fought with them. A few of these brave men still live n Western Texas. The Navarro, Manchaea, Mexia, and other families of note were among these patriots, and their descendants now in or near San Antonio are held in great esteem. It is possible that a few Mexican volunteers were in the Alamo during its memorable siege. This would account for Guerro's presence within the blood-stained walls. He states in his pension application that "with five other men he attempted to gain the room occupied by the women, and in doing so the other four were killed. When he gained the apartment he induced the women to secrete him beneath the bedding and sit on it when the captors effected an entrance. After they had made the capture of the place he waited an hour on the spot where he was concealed, and then passed out unobserved and hid himself in a house to which the women had fled and taken refuge."

Edison at Home.

From illustrated paper in Scribner for November.]

Of the number of persons in the aboratory, remark principally the one you may have least thought of selecting, from the informality of his appearance. The rest are but skilful assistants to whom he is able to commit some experiments in their secondary stages. It is a figure of perhaps five feet nine in height, bending intently above some detail of work. There is a general appearance of youth about it, but the face, knit into lines. anxious wrinkles, seems old. The dark hair, beginning to be touched with gray, falls over the forehead in a mop. The hands are stained with acid, and the clothing is of an ordinary, "ready-made" order. It is Edison. He has the air of a mechanic, or more definitely, with his peculiar pallor of a night printer. His features are large; the brow well shaped, without unusual development; the eyes light gray; the nose irregular; and the mouth displaying teeth which are, also, not altogether regular. When he looks up his attention comes back slowly, as if it had been a long way off. But it comes back fully and cordially, and the expression of the face is then prepossessing. A smile chases away the somewhat grave and weary look that belongs to it in its moments of rest. He seems no longer old. He has alboy released from his tasks.

Disasters, &c. [By Telegraph to the Morning Star.] WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 .- A heavy rain storm, accompanied by a violent wind from the northeast, passed over the city last night from 1 o'clock until 7 this morning. The wind was very high, unroofing houses, uprooting trees, and doing other damage. Owing to the storm the signal office received only twenty out of the usual hundred and twenty reports from various signumber of Mexicans, a few of them | nal stations. The western reports came by way of New Orleans. It was an Atlantic coast storm, and did not reach the Mississippi Valley. The storm came from the tropics. At 11 o'clock on the morning of the 20th the signal service ordered up signals at Key West for a storm in south Florida. On the morning of the 21st the storm was to the southeast of Key West, and on the morning of the 22nd to the east of southern Georgia. At midnight of the 22nd it was, with greatly increased velocity, central near Cape Hatteras, on the North Carolina The maximum velocity of the wind was sixty miles an hour. From midnight to noon to-day the storm, rapidly increasing in energy, was central near Baltimore. The pressure at the centre this morning was below 29.9 inches. It was all attended with an unusual heavy rainfall. Here the fall was 3 54 inches; at Baltimore, 2.74 inches; Norfolk, 2.86; Lynchburg, 2.01; Smithville, N. C., 4.32.

A deeply laden threemasted schooner, with signs for assistance, was off Hooper's Straits, and another vessel near her, bottom up. Off Sandy Point a Bay vessel was sunk, and off Magathy river another.

RICHMOND, Oct. 23 .- A heavy wind and rain storm prevailed here last night, particularly for several hours after midnight, when the wind became almost a hurricane. It was the hardest storm in this vicinity for years, and doubtless considerable damage has been done; the extent of which, however, has not yet been ascertained, beyond the blowing down of signs, trees and fences in the city, and damage to the telegraph

Pimilco Races Postponed on Account of Storm-Suspension of a Banking House.

[By Telegraph to the Morning Star.] BALTIMORE, Oct. 23.—The races at Pim the flooding of the track by the severe storm of wind and rain last night.

The banking house of Clabaugh, Nelson & Co. has suspended, and has made an assignment to J. Alex. Preston, for the benefit of its creditors. The cause of the failure is attributed to the losses of the senior partner, W. H. Clabaugh, in the St. Clair Hotel, of which he was the proprietor, the shrinkage in real estate, and the general dry rot in the basiness of the banking house. Liabilities of the hotel and banking house about $100,000, of which $50,000 are secured. The assets consist mostly of real estate and book accounts. The election for members of the First Branch of the Baltimore City Council, held yesterday, resulted in the choice of Democrats in every ward.
