FROM SHADOW TO SUNSHINE. LOUIS E. BOYD.

One morn I stole upon a little brook
Seeming asleep, by shadows sheltered so,
And sought far down into its breast to look And if its bed were sand or pebbles know; But as I bent I caught a mournful gleam Of a dim face, and knew it way my own; And with it rose so many a memory dream I turned away, nor cared if sand or stone Lay 'neath the waters; then I wandered on Where the same brook went dancing in the light

Of merry sunbeams; 'twas a lovely sight.
My shadow now, and thoughts of self

were gone—
And well I knew that pebbles were below,
Because the little waves were laughing so. WHAT CONSUMERS PAY.

Phil. Record, Ind.

According to a recent statement of the Treasury officicals, which has appeared in the Record, each head of the population of the United States paid under the tariff, according to the returns of 1883, if the taxes were equally distributed, the sum of $3.78. The total population is placed in this estimate at 54,163,000. As the average number of persons in a family is returned at five, each head of a family pays into the Treasury $18.90. in duties on imports. If the family of the workingman consists of eight persons his contribution amounts to $30.00, instead of $18.90. But this is a small portion only of the taxation of consumers under the operation of the tariff. With existing data it would have been no very difficult task for the Treasury officials to pretty accurately ascertain what each head of the population pays by the indirect tariff process. As the object of the protective policy is to obstruct foreign competition, and thereby to enhance the cost of the home products, the grand result of the system must be sought in the statistics of domestic production. According to the census returns of 1880 the total value of the products of the protected industries was $2,440,502,649. The care fully prepared statement made by the Hon. William Springer, of Illinois, shows that the total amount of incidental taxes on this production, being the increased cost of home commodities by reason of the tariff, was $556,938,637; and this is a very low estimate. Besides the taxes on imports which go into the Treasury, each head of the population then pays a little more than $10.25 which does not go into the Treasury, but is diverted to the pockets of producers or is wasted in unprofitable undertakings. Each head of a family of five persons pays $51.25 in the increased cost of home produts by the tariff, in addition to the $18.90 which he puts into the Treasury for the support of government in taxes on imports, making a total of $19.15. This is a fearful tax to come out of the wages of a laboring man.

Nor is this quite all that the protective system costs the consumer. Rents of houses are necessarily increased because of the cost imposed by the tariff upon building materials of every description. The prices of many commodities besides such as are in the protected list, and of many services, are enhanced by this system. The butcher, the baker and the plumber are obliged to distribute a portion of the taxation which the tariff imposes on them. But let the workingman carefully con these tariff figures. It cannot be said that the amount of taxation is exaggerated. The figures are under rather than above the mark. If such results in enhancing the cost of commodities were not produced the tariff system would have no value, and there would not be the desperate struggle against any reduction of its burdens that is now witnessed in Congress. TAXATION .-- THE BLAIR BILL.

Louisville Courier-Journal, Dem.

Every dollar appropriated means a dollar raised, or to be raised, by taxation, and to that extent increases the burdens of the people. It matters not under what forms it may be concealed, the poison is there, and it will do its deadly work, sapping the vigor of the people and destroying their industrial forces. Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily the hearts of men are hardened and their minds are blinded. There is no more demoralizing or degrading skepticism than this. It in time amounts to a superstitious belief that the whole suspended, so far as we are concerned. and that this nation may go on forever ignoring laws without any fear of retribution. And yet retribution waits for us; it is as inexorable and inevitable.

The Blair-bill appropriates nearly $80,000,000 for the benefit of schools. This means that $80,000,000 is to be raised by taxation. It means either that taxes are to be increased to that amount, or else that the reduction of taxation shall be that much less. It will be taken from one of two reservoirs, the National Treasury or the pockets of the people; but in either case it is taxation, taking from the people money they would prefer to

THE GROWTH OF REVENUE

Washington Post, Dem

The revenue reform sentiment, apparent from the Boston circular and its signers, leads the Philadelphia Times to say that Pennsylvania will be obliged to bear the fight for protection. It is very doubtful if anything less than this voice from New England would have made our Philadelphia contemporary admit that the Eastern States are no longer with her, and that the burden is hers. Still it is true.

The extreme protection opinions of Pennsylvania entertained alike by Republicans and a large proportion of the Democrats, and which have been suffered to become a part of the National Republican creed, are as distasteful to very many who believe in the comparatively light protective tariffs of Henry Clay as to those who have faith in the low ta-

A SUBSTANTIAL REDUC-TION IS DEMANDED.

What the Republican Tariff Commission Reported.

From Hon. S. S. Cox's Speech.

Every year since 1857 I have spoken against these enormous an unequal exactions by tariff. Will it always be pretended by interested folk to adjust things equitably would disturb "business interests?" Because I would have no revenue law which does not give labor an equal chance with capital, must I be re-proached as one who cares not for the interests of either labor or capi-tal? It is time to have a review of our fiscal relations.

In reply to the imputation of disturbing the business interests, may 1 quote with emphasis from the report of our late Tariff Commission to Congress? I find in it the following

"Early in its deliberations the commission became convinced that a substantial reduction of tariff duties is demanded, not by a mere indiscriminate popular clamor, but by the best conservative opinion of the country, including that which has in former years been most strenuous for the preservation of our national industrial defenses. Such a reduction of the existing tariff the commission regards not only as a due recognition of public sentiment and a measure of justice to consumers, but one conducive to the general industrial prosperity, and which, though it may be temporarily inconvenient, will be ultimately beneficial to the special interests affected by such re-

THE MASSACHUSETTS RE-

VOLUTION.

N. Y. Times, Rep. The tariff reform movement in Massachusetts is the beginning of the end of the policy of express pro-tection in the United States. Of this there can be no doubt when the events which have led up to the movement and the circumstances surrounding it are considered. Massachusetts was, only a few years since, the stronghold of protection, and the votes of its Representatives and Senators could be counted on to resist any serious reduction in protective taxes. The vague though strong dissatisfaction with the tariff, which brought about the revision of last year, found but little manifestation in that State. and the revision was generally conceded to be most delusive with reference to the industries of Massachusetts, and to have been much influenced by her manufactures. Had the feeling of the business men of the State remained unchanged there was every reason for resolute inaction at the present time, because, in the absence of positive popular support, the tariff reform legislation in Con-gress must fail of either immediate or remote effect. Like inaction was dictated by every consideration of ordinary political prudence. The Democracy are divided as to the reform, and the Republicans, to all appearances, throughout the Union, are united and consolidated in their opposition to it.

But this is the moment selected by some eight hundred of the men prominent in business and in public life in Massachusetts to organize a movement to cut down the surplus and for "decisive action looking to the ultimate abandonment of the policy of taking imposts not for revenue but for the purpose of obstracting trade." The movement, though non-partisan, in the sense that it is shared by men of standing in both parties, is distinctly political. Its intent is to bring to bear on Congress the influence of an aroused and enlightened public opinion, and that influence will unquestionably be expressed in votes. The men who have undertaken this task are practical, experienced, sagacious, and to the last degree in earnest.

Swept Into the Stream.

One Thousand Acres of Land and Right Smart of Rears." On the deck of a big Mississippi steamboa stood an aged Southern planter. Indicating by a sweep of his arm the waters the boat was passing over, he said to a passenger from the North: "Whea I was twelve years old I killed my first bear on a new plantation my father was then cutting out of a forest that grew directly over the waters of this bend. That was a mighty good plantation, and there was right smart of bears there, too. But that one thousand acres of and went into the Mississippi years ago." It is putting no strain upon the figure to say that great forests of youthful hope, womanly beauty and manly strength are swept in the same way every year into the great, turbid torrent of disease and death. Yet it should not be so. That it is so is a disgrace as well as a loss. People are largely too careless or too stupid to defend their own interests—the most precious of which is health. That gone, all is gone. Disease is simple, but to recklessness or ignorance the simplest things might as well be complex as a proposition in Conic Sections. As the huge Western rivers, which so often flood the cities along their shores, which so often flood the cities along their shores, arise in a few mountain springs, so all our allments can be traced to impure blood and a small group of disordered organs. The most effective and inclusive remedy for disease is PARKEH'S TONIC. It goes to the sources of pain and weakness. In response to its action the liver, kidneys, stomach and heart begin their work afresh, and disease is driven out. The Tonic is not, however, an intox-icant, but cures a desire for strong drink Have you dyspepsia, rheumatism, or troubles which have refused to yield to other agents? Hure is
