TREES AND PLANTS.

THE present year of scarcity demonstrates the importance of the cultivation of fruit, particularly, for cooking, which (sugar being low,) makes a more wholesome, palatable and cheaper diet for summer than meats. All persons should have large Orchards and use less Bacon. Apples and late peaches are rarely No; finding itself unable to sustain the seen in our market, though much wanted. It is said that fruit does not succeed in our climate, but as it does north and south of us it Orders for trees and plants should be made
