many American editions show how it has been appreciated.

"A very considerable period of time and a great deal of labor have been expended upon this edition. Most of the notes have been entirely re-written; and all of them have been re-modeled and re-arranged. A thorough analysis of each subject has been made, which, with a very full index to each volume, it is thought will furnish all needful facilities for reference. The matter has been a good deal condensed, by omitting whatever seemed theoretical rather than practical, by dispensing with such of the English statutes as have no bearing upon American law or practice. The notes in their present form contain, however, a large amount of new matter, and several subjects are introduced which were not treated in the former edition. The authorities have been carefully re-examined, and all of the re-ported, and numerous manuscript cases in each of the several states, down to the date of publication, added. The criminal statutes of sixteen of the states have bee digested and distributed under the appropriate heads, together with such English statutes, the construction of which from their similarity to our own, seemed likely to aid the American practitioner. A concise outline of all the more important cases cited by Mr. Archbold has also been given; thus presenting, in a convenient and accessible form, all of the leading English criminal

The Magistrates of Cumberland County are required to meet at the Court House in Fayetteville, on Wednesday of September 1997. etteville, on Wednesday of Sep- of Saturday evening, makes some very sensible suggestions: "In our occasional trips to the various suburbs of the city we have observed hundreds of build-Court, and the transaction of County business generally.

D. G. MacRAE, Chm'n. of the city we have observed hundreds of buildings with lightning-rods which, in our judgment, render them less secure than they would be without any rods. Upon inquiry we find them to be somebody's patent insulators and patent points, ning, just like the quack medicines which heal

"A few days since a barn near Tarrytown was struck and instantly set on fire and consumed, although it had two rods. Shortly before this occurrence we examined a house in Plainfield, (N of their own importation, together with a great variety | J.) with an insulated rod upon it, in complete of American Goods in the same line, composing one of the largest stocks of HARDWARE and CUTLERY ever utterly useless to protect the building from a light discharge of electricity which fell upon it and then left it, breaking one of the insulators and passing through the house. In this latter case the building was surrounded by several others of about the same height, without rods upon them, and it is to be assumed, therefore, that the selection of this particular building by the discharge had something to do with the presence of the lightning-rod thereupon. In other words, if the rod had not been there the building would not have been struck, and its inmates might have escaped all barm. Having observed many like cases, we feel supported in saying, when we see a house with similarly constructed and applied rods, that it is more endangered than protected thereby. "The time is perhaps coming when the people will learn by experience, if in no other way, that the exact adaptation of the rod to the nature and degrees of the exposure of the building, as regards lightning, is absolutely essential to its efficacy. The services of an 'expert mechanic' may be very properly and usefully employed in the erection of the rods, but the decision as to their mode of construction and location upon the building demands, in the highest degree, the exercise of the soundest scientific judgment and experience. A mistake in this particular increases the danger, as the frequent failures of lightning-rods fully demon-

"Lightning-rods should be examined every season, so as to detect and remedy any defects which time may have rendered apparent. They should be kept free from paint; and if any altercation or addition to the building is made they should be examined by a competent person, to decide whether they require re-adjustment to conform to the altered condition of the building. If the lightning-rod is correctly applied in the first place, and kept in order, it may be implicitly relied upon as a complete safeguard from light-

The First Lesson in Gambling .- Wherever there are great collections of people, there are always bad and foolish people among them. It was so at Bridgeport, where the State fair was held recently. Outside the grounds, behind or within tents or booths, were many who gambled and led others to do so. Now it is a very simple thing to gamble; so simple, and often it appears so fair, that many a boy is led to take the first step before he knows it. There was behind one of the oyster-star circle of men and boys; on the ground sat a poor, degraded, dissipated man, poorly clothed and looking sick and weak. He held in his hand several iron rings, and before him was a board with large nails driven in it which stood upright. Anatomy.

"Six cents," was the answer; and two three-cent pieces were put into his band, and he stepped off well satisfied with what he had done, and probably not having an idea that he had done wrong. A gentleman standing near had watched him, and now before he had time to look about and re-
