

Educate the Youth.

Some one has said—"I care not who makes your laws, so that I may write the songs of the people." The influence of simple ballads on the minds of the young and uneducated was considered of greater moment and more enduring than all the power exerted by laws controlling absolutely the lives of men.

If philosophic minds detect such power in childish ballads over the mankind; how much greater is the influence of regularly directed efforts to form the character of the young through systems of directing their energies, and inculcating sound principles of thought and study? The evil of a contrary system of instruction we as a country have felt in five years of desolating war, and waste sufficient to build up schools all around the world. Our people deeply recognize the necessity of reorganization of our school system, under the present very able Superintendent of Public Instruction whose circular we publish on the proper way to observe Independence Day in this State.

The only safety for society lies in well instructed children. Ignorance is ever presumptuous, and the men who try to disturb the peace of every community are always brutal from the effect of ignorance.

With a large and impressive population; it but remains for our better classes to give every encouragement to the cause of popular instruction. In the inculcation of sound ideas, and republican principles lies the safety of the country, and let not North Carolina be eclipsed by any Southern State. In order to gain this ascendancy we should be pleased to have the most modern ideas introduced into the management of our schools. Among the most important of these is the establishment of the "technical" or practical mechanic branch. Of all the needs that vex our disturbed body politic; the need of educated labor is the most pressing. We want men who can develop the resources of our soil; our mines; and turn to use the water power and all the material products now shipped elsewhere to cause other people's factories; mills and machinery to flourish and enrich their owners. We do not want suckling military academies where the enthusiasm of youth is turned into channels we should make it our highest duty to avoid.

A great example might be set in the "University" by establishing there the first graded practical school for practical students and by dropping all forms of education at war with the spirit of the age settle the vexed question of patronage and education at the same time.

Dropping the study of the dead languages or making them of less importance than the more modern tongues; let our University managers call upon the Legislature for assistance to fill the empty benches as well as give additional attractions to the great "SCHOOL OF THE STATE." Let us in reality as well as in name make this the mother school for North Carolina. Not the North Carolina of the past, but the living, active, progressive State of the present! To do this we must have practical as well as theoretical professors in education. The graduate will be one well versed in those exact sciences by which the life of the day is made all the more glorious. The youth who enters Chapel Hill will do so as a child of the State and we hope to see the West Point system of appointing students introduced as the first measure of reform. To do this an act must be passed giving each Representative the power of appointing one or more students; who shall pass a competitive examination and be educated at the expense of the State.

Water or no Water?

The question of public improvements in the way of paved streets, well lighted avenues of travel, and well watered houses has been so often discussed and so often decided in favor of all of the above mentioned blessings, that it is not necessary to argue further on the matter, but less some one who loves a slow dollar better than one hundred nimble dimes, should carp and cavil at expenses involved in the introduction of water to a community, we will state that of twenty cities that have water introduced through the persistent enterprise and courage of a few clear-headed citizens, we have yet to learn of one of these which have failed to grow in proportion to the expense incurred so that increase of wealth gave ready means to meet increased taxation. Again the improvement to property gives a higher value to the same, and the increased rent the householder can obtain after water has been introduced is itself sufficient guarantee of the ability of the owner to pay increased tax.

The very name of water in a city gives an additional attractiveness and draws residents from less favored localities, and in case of fire, why the amount of property saved annually in every city possessing water works more than compensates for the labor and expense involved in the obtaining of the same.

OLIVE LOGAN writes a womanly and thoroughly artistic article for Packard's Monthly in which she defends her profession and art against the barbarian inroad of badity and indecency called "the naked drama."

The Temperance Movement.

The question of restricting the sale of ardent spirits has been discussed by different State legislatures, and still remains unsettled. The more Western sections of the country, where law is less strictly enforced or respected, occasionally have a disputatious temperance convention which winds up by an excited and most intemperate crowd assailing bar-rooms and knocking in the heads of whiskey barrels. Thus setting a bad example, and causing the dealer in spirits to show his "spirit" by selling a more villainous article than before.

That men will have stimulants is a well established fact, and recognizing this, we, as reasonable men, must seek to confine the sale of liquors into the hands of discreet and respectable men. The injury to society arises from the dealing out damnation in the way of adulterated liquors by men who have no character or regard for the health of their fellow citizens. The men who do this generally belong to an order, but little recognized by the respectable part of the community. The State, by a rigid inspection of all beverages offered for sale; by licensing only men of good standing, and punishing with the utmost severity unlicensed and adulterating dealers, may advance the cause of temperance more than all the total abstinence regulations ever adopted. Let the city of Wilmington set the example and by a system of inspection root out all the low dram shops where poison is sold to laboring men, who but for this would be good and respectable citizens.

The new dispensation which many earnest souls think they foresee in the present movement for the elevation of women is thus eloquently set forth by Colonel Higginson, in his article on "The Greek Goddesses," in the Atlantic:—"We are laying the foundations of a grand temple, I trust, than any of which the Greeks ever dreamed, and we toil among the dust and rubbish, waiting for the goddess and the shrine. Nothing shall drive me from the belief that there is arising in America, amid all our frivolities, a type of virgin womanhood, new in history, undescribed in fiction, from which there may proceed, in generations yet to come, a priesthood more tender, a majesty more pure and grand, than anything which poet ever sang or temple enthroned. Through tears and smiles, through the blessed cares that have trained the heart of womanhood in all ages, but also through a culture such as no other age has offered, through the exercise of rights never before conceded, of duties never yet imposed, will this heroic sisterhood be reared. Joining the unforgetting visions of Greek sabbaticism with the meeker graces of Christian tradition, there may yet be nobler forms, that shall outstrip those 'fair humanities of old religion'; as when classic architecture had reached perfection, there rose the Gothic, and made the Greek seem cold.

Another Battle Summer.

The present attitude of the great European Powers gives us reason to believe that another season of carnage shall mark this also as a "Battle Summer" even as others that have passed since the dark days of July, 1848, when the present usurper to the French throne laid his perfidious hands upon the garments of the goddess of liberty. The massing of troops on the Belgian frontier by the Emperor Napoleon, and the mistrust of all the other ruling potentates of each other and the "man of December" convinces us that speedily a spark may ignite the entire European magazine, and so cause a general explosion all over Europe. We are not prepared to assert that this explosion would be productive of more good next year or the year after, but we believe that the next great eruption will make Republics possible where only Empires now exist.

Miss Susan B. Anthony is out with a paragraph in the Revolution recommending that married people should no longer sleep together; that every man, woman and child should have a bed to him or herself; that those who are best going to housekeeping should buy no double beds; and she exclaims with enthusiasm, "Cribs, cots, and single beds for health and happiness!"

THE Bavarians have the reputé, ill or well deserved, of being the Boetians of Germany. They are supposed to drink beer as one man, swallow ultramontanism, and browse like a herd in the pastures of monarchy. But their late elections contrast in an interesting way with those in France, and suggest to us that even in German Boetia something is brewing beside beer.

THE effect of healthy habits is shown in the strength Europeans hold even in extreme age. An English paper states that in a trial of strength, recently, with a number of his young aides decamp in lifting heavy loads, the old King of Prussia surpassed them all. None of them were older than thirty-five, while the King is seventy-two years of age.

THE assistance of Virginia's railroad managers although extended very courteously to North Carolina excursionists when Norfolk was the objective point, does not appear when points in this State are to be visited.

THE Norfolk Day Book raises the question whether the test oath has been properly used in North Carolina; seeing that General Canby will insist upon all newly elected members of the Virginia Legislature taking this oath.

We have received the "Address of Immigration" delivered by Dr. Satchwell before the Emigration Association of this State.

An English American War—How it would end for England.

If there is a problem unsolved, of which one can safely predict the solution—a bantling yet unborn whose shape we can see to a nicety—it is this: how an English American war would end for England. It might not be so easy to foretell the upshot to the United States, at least give an account forecast of it.

But as regards England we can shape the result, and to a dead certainty. And we do, by proclamation, that if such strife is to occur, it will end in England's complete national humiliation; in reducing her to a second, or perhaps third rate power among the nations of the earth.

And this reduction will be in an exact ratio to the duration of the war. After two years of fighting she would find herself a second-rate nation, and in two more an indifferently third. But she would never let it run to two years, nor yet the half of it. In less than twelve months after the first shot had been fired, John Bull would be down upon his knees, no longer blustering about war, but piteously appealing for peace.

He could in no way avoid such humiliation; it is a result as inexorable as fate itself. He would have to yield to it or die. The man, English or American, who cannot see this solution of the problem, and clearly too, must be either dull of comprehension, or negligent of observation, or both. If the history of the last six years has not made this problem palpable to him, nothing ever can.

But although one of the simplest and easiest of solutions, it is too important to be left unspoken; and in the present crisis, be brought too much before the American mind. It may also benefit John Bull, to have it put plainly before him. It may do something toward restraining his braggadocio, and bringing him, if not to a more accurate sense of national honor and international justice, at least a better knowledge of himself and his impotency.

And this may be the means of saving him from the most complete political humiliation that could be chronicled upon the pages of history. To use a hackneyed phrase, the whole thing ties in a nut shell; though we might word it, by saying the shell of a ship. It is simply a problem in arithmetic—under the chapter of Simple Proportion, or the Rule of Three. And thus may it be formulated: "If the whole steam corsair could destroy the whole commercial marine of the United States in a single year, how many will it take, and how long time, to do as much for the merchant navy of England—Onward for June."

SPECIAL OFFICIAL CITY ORDINANCE.

AN ORDINANCE FOR THE BETTER PROTECTION OF THE POLICE FORCE. Whereas doubts have been entertained as to the construction of section 4 of General Ordinances of the city of Wilmington. Be it ordained by the Board of Aldermen of the city of Wilmington as follows: Section 1. That any policeman who may be on his beat or acting under the orders of the Mayor or Marshal, whether by day or night, shall be deemed to be in the discharge of duty, and any person who may violate the said section of said ordinance shall suffer the penalties thereby enforced, any ordinance to the contrary notwithstanding.

Sec. 2. This ordinance shall be in force from and after its passage. Passed in Board of Aldermen June 21, 1890. BENJ. DURFEE, City Clerk. 285-21

HELMBOLD'S CONCENTRATED FLUID EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA. ERADICATES ERUPTIVE AND ULCERATIVE DISEASES OF THE THROAT, NOSE, EYES, EYELIDS, SCALD, and SKIN.

Which so disfigure the appearance, PURGING the evil effects of mercury and removing all taints, the remnants of DISEASE, hereditary or otherwise, and is taken by ADULTS and CHILDREN with perfect SAFETY. TWO TABLE-SPOONFULS of the Extract of Sarsaparilla, added to a pint of water, is equal to the London Diet Drink, and one bottle is equal to a gallon of the Syrup of Sarsaparilla, or the decoctions as usually made.

AN INTERESTING LETTER is published in the Medical-Chirurgical Review, on the subject of the Extract of Sarsaparilla, in certain ailments by Benjamin Travers, F. R. S., &c. Speaking of those diseases, and diseases arising from the excess of mercury, he states that no remedy is equal to the Extract of Sarsaparilla; its power is extraordinary, more so than any other drug I am acquainted with. It is, in the strictest sense, a tonic with this invaluable attribute, that it is applicable to a state of the system so unwell, and yet so irritable, as renders other substances of the tonic class unobtainable or injurious.
