first perusal of the poem furnishes an amu-sing anecdote. This distinguished contributor to Punch was recruiting himself at Brighton after a long illness. In the pro-gress of his convalescence a parcel arrived large how which passed over from London, which contained, among other things, this new volume "Sordello." The medical attendant had forbidden Mr. Jerrold the luxury of reading; but owing to the absence of his conjugal life guards, he indulged in the illicit enjoyment. A few lines put Jerrold in a state of alarm. Sentence after sentence brought no consecutive thought to his brain. At last the idea crossed his mind that in his illness his mental tion rolled from his forehead, and, smiting men were furious over General Rosecrans' his forehead, he sat down on the sofa, cry ing, "O God, I am an idiot." When his wife and her sister came, they were amused by his pushing the volume into their hands, and demanding what they thought of it. He watched them intently while they read; at last his wife said, "I don't understand what the man means : it is gibberish." The delighted humorist sank in his seat again, saying, "Thank God, I am not an idiot !"
