

FOOTSTEPS OF DECAY.

Oh! let the soul its slumbers break—
Arouse its senses and awake,
To see how soon
Life in its glories glides away,

And while we view the rolling tide,
Down which our flowing minutes glide
Away so fast,
Let us the present hour employ,

Let no vain hope deceive the mind—
No happier let us hope to find
To-morrow than to-day,
Our golden dreams of youth were bright,

Our lives like lastning streams must be,
That into one engulfing sea
Are doomed to fall—
The sea of death whose waves roll on

Like the river's lordly tide,
Alike the humble rivulets glide
To that sad wave,
Death levels poverty and pride,

And rich and poor sleep side by side
Within the grave.

EUROPEAN CORRESPONDENCE.

PARIS, Sept. 12th 1893.
DEAR POST:—I promised to write you a line from this side, but, since my landing in England, I have been almost all the time, en voyage.

Traveling, with light baggage and uncertain destination, I have been unable to keep my promises in the matter of correspondence, although I have often thought of you and desired greatly to hear of your welfare.

I have had little or no news from Wilmington. Sometimes I pick up a scrap from a New York paper and I get a letter with some news items, but I am quite unposted regarding you all.

I see the contest was sharp for legislative honor and ended as I was sure it must—Tarkins' defeat.

I am well since I left W—. My improvement has been rapid. I have no rheumatism, my legs are getting their youthful pliability and I can walk and run as I have not been able to do for six years past.

I go in a day or two to Wiesbaden, where I shall try the famed waters, and buds, their reputation is so great I look for greater improvement than ever.

I landed in Liverpool on 5th of August, spent a day or two there, then to London, where I spent three days, then to Paris, where I remained until after the Grand Fete of the 15th, which was a most magnificent sight, well worth a trip across the Atlantic.

On the 17th I started on a trip through Switzerland and parts of Germany. I visited Basle, Lucerne, and the Lake, surrounded with beautiful scenery and spots where were enacted the greatest deeds of Swiss valor.

The land of the cowards' and the cowards' complicity. Hence we go to Zurich, a lovely town situated on a lake of same name. Then to Coire, way up the mountains; this is a spot where wonders are seen in mountain beauty, ruined castles and Churches of the fifth and even fourth centuries.

From Coire we go to Roschack, then by steamer to Constance; this is another of the beautiful lakes of the country. From Constance to Shaffhouse. Here we visit the Falls of the Rhine, the most beautiful waterfall in Europe, where the five falls eighty feet in most indescribable beauty. It is beautiful; I know nothing to which it can be compared.

From Shaffhouse we go to Geneva visiting Bernese, etc. This is a beautiful city, full of gems of industry and art, provided with fine roads, beautiful gardens and all the fascinating entertainments provided by the people to attract visitors to their country.

In this respect we, in America, are far behind. One traveling in Europe never finds himself in so small a town that he cannot find a garden of flowers, music and pleasure at hand. The gardens of Europe in Summer are the gathering places of all grades of population, and the cool afternoons and evenings—see the young, the old, the gay and grand all enjoying the beauties and pure air.

From Geneva, we go to Baden Baden. This, as you are aware, is the great Summer resort of Europe, and the greatest gambling place in the world. I got there just in the height of the season. The races were to come off and crowds were gathering. The arrangements are on a good scale for the accommodation of visitors. Everything is built and adorned by the first artists. The gambling tables are surrounded by crowds all the time, and the continuous rattling of gold and silver coins reminds one of golden showers. An immense revenue is derived from this place by the local government. The races were fine, and well attended.

On the night of the 21st of August, there was a grand ball, to which I went. There one sees all the wildest transports of the imagination, in reality. One sees the congressed beauty of all lands, jewels and fabrics of every land and name. For the moment the every day, musty, matter of fact world is forgotten and transported beyond. One revels in "Charmes on Espagnole" ad libitum.

I left Baden Baden with many sighs and regrets. The air was beautiful, the scenery grand. Old Castles and Churches abound here, a week's stay only made me wish to stay longer. We now take rail for Strasburg where is seen the old Cathedral with its spire of 475 feet in height—the highest in the world—being 125 feet higher than St. Pauls in London, and 24 feet higher than the highest pyramid. I can vouch for its being high. I went up to the upper steeple, or about 125 feet below its top, and shall always in my imagination believe it to be 2,000 feet! Here is the wonderful clock with its twelve apostles and wonderful mechanism, I saw it strike twelve in the day, and heard the cock crow thrice. It is a very wonderful thing and has never been surpassed until recently.

One has been built for the Cathedral of Bauvais of much superior workmanship. The Cathedral is something really worth visiting, its beauties cannot be described. From Strasburg I come to Paris. So you see I have by no means been idle, having been all alive and hard at work. I forgot in the appropriate place to say that at Geneva I visited Lake Lemans, and spent an hour at the famous Castle of Chillon, famed as the prison of Bonivard, who for four years was chained to a pillar of stone, and was the hero of Byron's "Prisoner of Chillon." It is a grand old fortress and prison, surrounded with water of 800 to 1,000 feet in depth, being built upon a projection of rock of the mountain just under water. It is more than one thousand years old, probably. In passing up the Lake we have admirable views of the famous Mont Blanc, which rises 14,800 feet, and is covered perpetually with snow. It is singular in appearance and looks much less than other mountains in height, the perspective deceiving one. It is seen at a very great distance, I suppose not less than thirty-five miles from the point I saw it.

All this part of Switzerland and great portions of Germany on the Rhine are grape raising, wine making countries. I carefully investigated the vines and wines and found much more poor, than good. The vines are raised on sticks, are cut down every fall and grow in height varying from two and a half to four feet. The soil in much of the grape country is poor. The country between Strasburg and Paris produces the finest champagnes of Europe. The vines are miserable stunted things, but the chalky soil imparts a flavor unattainable elsewhere. In Switzerland everybody works. It is a country of equal rights. Women have rights there. They work in the field, yoked with cattle. The cows all work, the children work. I said to myself, "How I wish the advocates of 'women's rights' in America could see how nice it is here!" I saw no beauty, no expression of spiritual brilliancy there, everything seemed reduced to hard work. Men, women, children, cattle, and dogs even, were at work. It is no doubt as much as they all can do to live even with this industry.

Yours truly,
SILAS N. MARTIN.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28, 1893.
The long agony is over! Gotham breathes free again. The bulls have heaved the gold market, and the result was, the suicide of one of the members of the gold board, and the complete financial ruin of seven or four leading brokers. No doubt, ere this, you have received the full intelligence by telegraph and therefore it would be a work of supererogation to enlarge upon a topic long since exhausted.

Enough, that the ring formed by Fisk and Gould was not of the right metal to fasten into the noses of the bears, and therefore the battle for the mastery, culminated in the gambling fiasco of Saturday.

All is quiet at present writing, with the advantage on the side of the bears.

THE LA CROSSE INDIANS.
These untutored and unkempt specimens of the red men of the prairie, have been delighting the residents of Gotham and vicinity, for the last three weeks in their exciting native game of La Crosse—which is very much like the Scotch game of "Shinny."

On Saturday evening last, they appeared at the mammoth Curriculum, Jersey City, "over the water"—and loud was their war-whoop, and great was their war-dance in their wampum, paint, and feathers.

But the most entertaining of the evening's amusement, was the contest between James Smith (champion pedestrian of the United States), and Grey Eagle, of the "Black-foot" Indians, a very remarkable runner.

The "pale face" was to walk one mile, while ye savage, Dexterized one mile and a half.

I am happy to announce that the representative of the noble Caucasian shed glory on his patronymic, and added a new laurel to his long woven chaplet, in distancing ye savage with the eagle eye, by ten seconds.

I was informed by the accomplished and gentlemanly proprietor, Professor Abner S. Brady, that the amusement hall, exceeding novel in its way, is a complete and decided success.

OUR FALL TRADE.
If busy thoroughfares; exciting carmen; seemingly endless lines of freight; throngs of carriages, and a mania for advertising, are prominent indications of a lively fall trade, then New York has as bright a commercial prospect as can be desired. Our little cars, and what city can boast of prettier ones, clad in their bombazine, scotch plaids, and rose colored velveteen suits, do look charming, as they pass up and down "The festive, gay Broadway."

On their shopping excursions, or in their daily promenades.

NEW BUILDINGS.
To enumerate the many grand buildings going up in our midst, is a task I will not undertake. Among the many marble and iron buildings, is Tiffany & Co's, corner of Fifteenth street and Broadway; the New York Post Office; Young Men's Christian Association; New York Life Insurance Company; Equitable Life Insurance Company, and many others. Any one of the buildings mentioned will cost over $500,000. The Post Office and New York Life Insurance Company over a million.

Rubinstein has just finished a grand cantata, entitled "The Tower of Babel," which will be performed for the first time at Kingsburg.—Exchange.

AGRICULTURAL.

Black locust is the best for posts.
Marl has been discovered in Allfordsville, S. C.

California raises corn 16 feet 10 inches high.
The rice crop in South Carolina promises well.

Wild oats are a pest to the farmers of California.
Thirty bushels of wheat to the acre in Michigan.

Thirty-two bushels of wheat to the acre in Oregon.
Thirty-five bushels of oats from one pint of seed in Vermont.

Pennsylvania has three hundred and fifty-four cheese factories.
Two hundred thousand bushels of last year's wheat crop in Iowa.

Broom corn brush is selling in Illinois at twenty-five cents a pound.
Talladega has an ear of corn containing 1,044 large developed grains.

The oat and wheat crop in Kansas is heavier than ever before known.
Wm. Dew has raised a Buckingham apple weighing one pound. Dew tell!

Jersey City has a pear—from San Francisco—measuring 13 inches around.
The Scarlet Radish seed should have a deep red color, small top and clear brittle root.

One acre of land in Oregon has yielded forty-one bushels of wheat. So says the Oregon Unionist.
Cultivate the mule, he is a destroyer of earth worms, slugs, cock chafers, wire worms and other pests of the farm.

The first Fair of the Carroll county (Maryland) Agricultural Society commences at Westminster, on Tuesday, and will be continued until Friday.
It is estimated that the orange crop on the St. John's river, Florida, this year, will be far larger than usual. Many groves are said to be more fruitful than they have been for ten years.

Next week the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society holds its annual Fair or Exhibition, at Harrisburg, and we understand that the arrangements are very complete in all particulars.

The last peach train of the season from Delaware arrived this morning, consisting of eight cars only. Up in the top of the last car was a small peach tree, or limb, from which was suspended a basket of peaches, typical of the fact that had been picked. The tremendous crop of peaches this summer has been unprecedented, and yet they have brought good prices throughout the season.—J. C. Journal.

The long prevailing drought has not been without its wholesome teachings to the farmers. Those who were wise enough to discard the too prevalent system of shallow plowing, imperfect pulverization, and sparse manuring, have passed through it with comparatively small damage; while those who have followed the old beaten paths, are to-day heavy losers by their neglect to attend to the plainest principles of agricultural teachings.

If you plow down your weeds before they go to seed, they will prove a benefit to your land instead of a curse. If they are allowed to go to seed they will be a source of endless trouble. Plowed under, they are worth as much as a dressing of manure. Besides enriching the soil they tend to keep it loose. If you add from twenty-five to fifty bushels of lime per acre to the ground, and harrow it in, it will convert your weeds into plant food.

A hog doesn't sweat like a horse or a man, but through the forelegs. There is a spot on each leg, just below the knee, in the form of a sieve. Through this the sweat passes off, and it is necessary that it be kept open. If it gets closed, as is sometimes the case, the hog will get sick; he will appear stiff and cramped, and unless he gets relief it will go hard with him. To cure him, just open the pores. This is done by rubbing the spot with a corn cob, and washing with warm water.

Daniel Webster once said: No man is so high as to be independent of the success of this great interest; no man is so low as not to be affected by the prosperity or decline. The cultivation of the earth is the most important labor of man. Man may be civilized in some degree, without great progress in man's affairs, and but little commerce with his distant neighbors, but without cultivation of the earth, he is, in all countries, a savage. Until he gives up the chase and fixes himself to some place and seeks a living in the earth, he is a roaming barbarian. When tillage begins, other arts follow. The farmers, therefore, are the founders of human civilization.

PURE LEMON SUGAR OR CONCENTRATED LEMONADE.
THIS PREPARATION OF LEMON RETAINS in great perfection the natural flavor of the fresh fruit together with its agreeable acidity. The facility with which a Glass of Lemonade may at any time be made with it, equaling any that can be made with the fruit in its natural state, recommends it to every household and gives it an especial value to travelers and excursionists, upon land or sea, and to the sick.
