present day, we could but moralize on the progress made in the past hundred years.

Near the Patent Office is a beautiful white marble building known as the post-office headquarters.

Although this building did not seem so very large when compared with some other public buildings in Washington, it is about ten times the size of the post-office at Raleigh, which we North Carolinians think is such an imposing edifice.

We were honored with an introduction to the First Assistant Postmaster General, Frank Harrison, who received us very politely and alluded to some of his war experiences in North Carolina.

He having been an officer in Sherman's army. The place of greatest interest in this building is the "Dead Letter Office." Here are received all the letters and other mail matter that remain undelivered post-offices.

All undelivered mail matter is forwarded to this office, and the letters are opened, and returned to the writer, if his address is given. We were told that 10,000 letters are received there on an average every day.

Many of these are addressed to the wrong person, and many are addressed to the wrong place, and many are addressed to the wrong person at the wrong place.

Some of these letters are very interesting, and many are very valuable. Some are addressed to the wrong person, and many are addressed to the wrong place.

The Convention was begun at Raleigh on last Monday, in free style and with much enthusiasm.

Judge Roberts had been invited to address the democratic club of that city, and on his arrival in the morning train he was met at the depot by a large band of a number of the leading citizens and escorted to the hotel.

At night there was a grand demonstration and a large outpouring of the people, and it is said that Judge Roberts made one of the greatest campaign speeches that was ever heard in Raleigh.

Every body felt proud of him as our standard-bearer, and all are sanguine of his election by an overwhelming majority.

He and G. J. Davis speak to-day in Hillsboro City, where and when the democratic Congressional convention of the first district meets.

We predict that democratic success will be one of the most brilliant and enduring results ever made in North Carolina.

Our Washington Letter.

From our regular correspondents.

Washington, D. C., July 15, '82

The expectation that Congress would be ready to adjourn by the end of this week was a delusion, and from recent indications it is not unlikely that the session will be prolonged into August.

The chief cause of this probable extension is the Revenue bill. It is generally admitted that the Kelley bill, passed by the House, is a mistake from every point of view, and many of the Republican leaders are convinced that it would be unwise, if not fatal, to let this session end without passing something better.

There is, in the Senate at least, a disposition to pass a measure that will be a substantial improvement on the Kelley bill, and the great difficulty is to agree upon the terms. There is a wide difference of opinion as to the best place to begin, and the proper place to leave off.

The amendments to the Kelley bill prepared by the Senate Finance Committee make one step in the right direction, but they simply open the door for an attack by individual Senators to catch on and attempt to bring with open. Proposals are being submitted from every side of the chamber extending the session to nearly every taxable article, including tobacco, whiskey, railroad iron, sugar, salt, and other articles.

Two Boys Drowned.

Washington Star, 19th.

Yesterday was the occasion of an excursion down the river on the steamer Passport and everything passed off pleasantly until after the boat arrived at Fort Caswell.

As soon as the boat touched the wharf five boys sprang ashore and hurried off up the beach to go in bathing, contrary to the warning of older persons, who endeavored to prevail upon them to leave the pleasure on account of the high wind and heavy sea.

Nothing further was thought or said about the matter, however, and the excursionists had partaken of lunch and were preparing to commence dining in the pavilion, the musicians being engaged in tuning their instruments, when intelligence came that two of the boys had been drowned, upon which all proceedings stopped and many hurried up the beach to learn the particulars of the disaster.

It appears that Capt. John W. Harper, commander of the Passport, had lunched and was taking a stroll along the beach, when he saw some body waving to him. Suspecting something wrong he hurried to the spot with all possible speed, and his foreboding confirmed, threw off what clothing he could hurriedly divest himself of and plunged into the surf, since being in landing on the beach, a boat of Mr. Samuel Bear, and another boy, whose name we could not ascertain, Capt. Harper had one of the boys, taking him to the shore when he was struck against a body under the water, and he succeeded in securing it also, after considerable difficulty, and even to the shore with the two. Upon reaching the beach Capt. Harper was just in time to see one of the two remaining boys sink exhausted beneath the huge waves, while the other had already disappeared.

As soon as the terrible news had been fully confirmed all preparations for further enjoyment and festivities ceased, the flags on the boat were lowered down, and as soon as possible all embarked and the boat returned to Smithville, where these remaining boys were taken on board and the boat of the Passport was then turned homeward, reaching here with us and an excursion party as well returned to our wharves.

Great credit is due Capt. Harper for his gallant conduct, but for which all five of the boys would most probably have been drowned.
