A LESSON IN ECONOMY.

Milly Barrington was only eighteen when he came to live at Holly Lodge. Very young to be married, said the gossips of the neighborhood...

Milly was so anxious to learn, so eager to comprehend the ins and outs of the great, rosy old farmhouse, so solicitous to excel every housekeeper in the neighborhood...

"Do you think Milly is addicted to either of those pernicious practices?" said he. "They come natural to all women, don't they?" said Dudley...

"Not to all," said the colonel. And in his secret soul he wondered if Dudley was really worthy of such a jewel as Millicent, his wife.

"You are a good little girl," said the father-in-law. "But we mustn't let you work too hard." "Well," said the colonel, encouragingly. "That I should like to ask you for a little money," faltered Milly.

And I do need another plume for my hat since the rain spoiled the canary-colored one, but I don't like to ask him for it. "Do you mean to say," said Colonel Barrington...

"No, papa," said Milly, lifting her prettily-arched brows. "Dudley says women don't know how to use money, and that a wife should always receive every cent she spends from her husband..."

"Here, little girl," he said, "you have earned them a dozen times over." Milly reached up to kiss him through the window-panes.

"Oh, papa, you are such a darling!" she said. He only patted her cheek in reply. "Dudley don't know what a treasure he has got," he pondered...

"I'm about out of ready cash," said Dudley, carelessly. "And a little spending money would come very handy for current expenses." "All?" objected the colonel.

"I give her all that she needs to spend," said Dudley, coloring up. "And I have given you all that you need," asserted Colonel Barrington.

"That is Millicent's case exactly," said the wise old advocate. "She does the work of the house and does it well. She is an economist in every sense of the word..."

ance to spend as she pleases. Do not think me a meddling old fogey, my son," Colonel Barrington added, rising and placing his hand kindly on his son's shoulder.

"I will, sir. You are right!" And Milly was delighted, that very day, to receive a check for an ample sum of money from her husband.

"No, you never feel more shame to me," acknowledged Dudley Barrington. "But I have come to the conclusion, Milly, that you are no child to be given a few cents at a time..."

"I'm about out of ready cash," said Dudley, carelessly. "And a little spending money would come very handy for current expenses." "All?" objected the colonel.

The largest gang-saw on the Pacific coast and probably in the world is that which has been set up in a saw mill at Taconia. It has a weight of thirty-five tons and a capacity of one hundred thousand feet of one inch boards per day.

FOR THE LADIES.

Fashion Notes. Elaborate lace ruche fichus are much worn. Lace aprons are novelties for house wear. White velvet is being used for bridal dresses.

Black kid gloves and black fans are worn with deep red and garnet toilets. The new linen collars are standing high, with a row of embroidery on the edge.

White hands, unglazed, covered with jewelry are now seen as frequently at operas and balls as gloved hands. Kid bonnets, kid gumps, galloons, and laces, all in the natural leather colors, are the fancy of the season.

Overalls cut open here and there and faced together with silk ereens are new and effective. With evening costumes of silk or satin the bolice is made to match, and the facing is done under the arms.

Plain skirts of broad striped material with several colors in the stripes, have a less pleasing of plain colored cashmere round the edge, trim, bolice, and cape, and look well. The cashmere must harmonize in color.

Even in these enlightened days there are people who affect to "look down" upon women who are obliged to work for their own livelihood. According to their code it is far more creditable for a woman to depend upon the goodling bounty of relatives and friends...

Hand-Shaking. Hand-shaking is British. The longer in society, in his glasses of fashion, enumerates its various styles as indicative of character. These are aggressive, supple, sympathetic, imperative, suspicious, sympathetic, emotional, but none of these are required by etiquette.

Origin of the Term "Honey-moon." The word "honey-moon" is traceable to a Teutonic origin. Among the Teutons was a favorite drink called "mead" or "mead" (from "mead" or "mead"). It was made of honey and such like the present mead of European countries.

Castling Sixes into the Sea. A strange scene was witnessed by an English visitor at Odessa on the first day of the present Jewish year. Late in the afternoon a large number of the 50,000 or 60,000 Jews inhabiting Odessa wended their way toward the sea with the purpose of throwing their last year's sixes into it...

In the Matter of Rest. Judge Blackley, of the Supreme Court of Georgia, having resigned, read the following verses on the conclusion of his last opinion. The verses may be found in 93 Geo. p. 452: Best for my hand, and brow, and breast, For fingers, hand and brain?

In Humboldt county, Cal., the whole area of the redwood forest has been mapped and plotted. There are something over 500,000 acres of that timber in that county alone. Disinterested experts estimate 100,000 feet of lumber per acre as an average, if not a small yield.

A well at Snapps, a small village in Woodruff county, Ark., flows water that is as sour as vinegar.
