Crows Who Know a Good Home.

A couple of tame snows, which had been kept as a sort of horsehold pets by a New Hartford family, at length became such mischievous nuisances and thieves stealing every bright and glistening thing they could poince upon, including la-dies' jewelry of all knobs, and listing it in distant trees, and once making off with a gold watch that it became expedient to get rid of them. They were combin't seed to a piece of woods emait miles distant, and there liberated the wagon being driven off in another direction. Next day one crow was back again, hunting about the kitchen for food, and showing every evidence of great satisfaction at getting back, while the cook joxfully welcomed him, and his companion wasn't long in returning. This first returning wantlever was a knowing fowl. When a hard, dry piece of bread was given him be would take it off to his basin of water, put it in, and let it mak a little.
