MR. BRENT'S BOARDER.

"Why are you so cool to me, Miss Hester?" "I can not cool to you, Mr. Kingsbury."

"The horse is coming out of the barn, Mr. Kingsbury; you will be late for your dinner if you do not start."

"I will kiss you." "There—you have knocked my hat off—go after it or it will be lost in the dark; I will hold the horse."

back to where the hat lay. As he picked it up he heard the snap of a whip, and looking forward saw the buggy vanishing in the distance.

"No, they cut it off last night," said Hester, screeching out in the long, dark lashes which hid her eyes as she colored.

"You would not care to have me star, Hester, would you?" "Don't you really think I should go after him?"

"Why, Miss Hester, what have they done to your beautiful hair?" cried Jack forgetting everything in his astonishment.
