

So many of the readers of the Record have requested us to tell them something more about our recent visit to the Northwest, that we will now describe the incidents of that most memorable and delightful day enjoyed in travelling from Chicago to St. Paul, a distance of about 450 miles. On the day before nearly 600 of our editorial party from the States south and west of Chicago had arrived at that city, and were tendered a special train by the Chicago and North Western Railroad Company to enter Lake Superior, Wisconsin, and St. Paul, Minnesota. Of course such a courtesy was gladly accepted and most highly appreciated, and accordingly at 9:30 o'clock on the morning of the 10th of July our party left Chicago starting on the magnificent train of the W. L. LONDON & CO. which our friends in Wisconsin did not permit us to examine as fully as we desired. To give an idea however of the luxurious business done there, we would mention that about 175 passenger trains with 25,000 passengers daily passed through the city. The Chicago and North Western Railroad was one of the finest ever run on any road, the equipment of trains, vestibule, and sleeping cars, each being equipped with magnificent and very very appropriately selected furniture. Everything connected with the day's excursion had been previously arranged and systematically and in a way that would tend to the comfort and convenience of our party. The different cars assigned to their respective States alphabetically, and thus it was that the editors from Mississippi, North Carolina and Ohio together occupied the same coach, and being with this in common an exceedingly pleasant arrangement. The most pleasant accommodations were secured on our entire trip. Especially fortunate were we in the matter of the genial editor of the Democrat (Mississippi) and his charming wife. Our companionship was shared with the presence of Ben W. Cappelletti of the W. L. L. Editor, who was a merry, happy party all through the journey and leaving a good feeling in this very city was supremely successful.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon we reluctantly bid farewell to Waukegan, whose public spirited citizens had made our visit there so pleasant, and in less than an hour our train arrived at Madison, Wisconsin's capital city, most beautifully situated and almost surrounded by four lakes of surpassing loveliness. A brass band welcomed the editors with their sweetest strains and quickly assembling from the train, we walked a short distance to the wharf at Lake Monona where five large steamers were waiting, in which we all embarked and steamed around the lake for an hour or more, enjoying a most delightful ride. After this we disembarked and proceeded to the hotel to entertain the guests of Madison's hospitable citizens. After supper which was about sunset, a few of us strolled through the "Park" and the public grounds surrounding the State House are called, and saw everything of interest that was there to be seen, and then inspected the State House of Capital City. This is a very large stone building most presentable in appearance and attractive appearance. Indeed it is one of the finest and noblest buildings in the United States, with its high dome, and other State Capital that we have ever seen. It is surrounded by trees and shrubbery in the best style, and Wisconsin has no more beautiful spot in it. In and about the grounds many noble and interesting things are seen. Among them is a collection of the birds of the Wisconsin mountains and woods, with appropriate and very fine specimens. The people of Wisconsin are proud of their State, and the more of the beauties of the State they see, they will appreciate and love it more. The people of Wisconsin are proud of their State, and the more of the beauties of the State they see, they will appreciate and love it more. The people of Wisconsin are proud of their State, and the more of the beauties of the State they see, they will appreciate and love it more.

Third Party Not Needed. We do not believe that the conservative or "Bent" members of the Farmers Alliance in this State are in favor of any third party. The late President of the State Alliance Mr. Elias Dyer does not think that any third party is needed in North Carolina, and the newly elected President, Mr. Marion Butler, has expressed the same opinion. He was at Raleigh a few days ago, and the impression left on his mind by the report of the Wisconsin Farmers Alliance in regard to the Third Party, and Mr. Butler distinctly declared that he was not in favor of it. We only wish the Wisconsin Farmers Alliance would follow.

Washington Letter. Washington, Sept. 9, 1891. If a business man was known to have outstanding paper, would he not be anxious to get rid of it? It is not so with the Farmers Alliance. The Farmers Alliance of North Carolina has a paper which is a valuable asset to the State. It is not so with the Farmers Alliance. The Farmers Alliance of North Carolina has a paper which is a valuable asset to the State. It is not so with the Farmers Alliance. The Farmers Alliance of North Carolina has a paper which is a valuable asset to the State.

Weekly Weather Crop Bulletin. Current Observer, Raleigh, N. C., September 4, 1891. The reports of correspondents of the Weekly Weather Crop Bulletin, issued by the State Climate Experiment Station and State Weather Service for the week ending July 31, September 4, 1891, show that although slightly better weather has been recorded in proportion to crops in some parts. The early part of the week was chiefly bright and the temperature reaching the maximum during the middle days. The weather was rather cool, but light showers, which were quite numerous, were falling. The rainfall was measured in the Eastern District and West to the Western, otherwise the only mention was provided generally for the State. Considerable crops were still in the field, and the weather was generally very good. The crops were generally very good, and the weather was generally very good. The crops were generally very good, and the weather was generally very good.

W. L. LONDON HAS GONE NORTH TO BUY OUR MAMMOTH STOCK OF Fall & Winter GOODS. H. MAHLER, Watches, Jewelry, Diamonds. FURNITURE. Ladies' Dress. W. L. DOUGLAS. A. G. Rhodes & Co. Edward Fasnach. THE SINGER SEWING MACHINE. PATENTS. NEW HOME SEWING MACHINE. C. A. SNOW & CO.