

The Average American citizen thinks that he has an insatiable thirst for office, and just at this time many a one seems determined to exercise that right.

gratified. For that human wreck had been a very distinguished member of both branches of Congress—a personal friend of Clay and Webster—a soldier as well as a statesman, and now like a shadow flitting around the scenes of his former greatness!

Important to Office Seekers.

Washington, March 10.—Mr. Cleveland's policy of refusing to reappoint his old office holders will be extended to every branch of the Government service.

On the subject of reappointments Mr. Russell said: "It is the intention of the Administration to reappoint only those whose offices were held by them before they were dismissed."

Mr. Cleveland and Reappointments. It is not only the policy of the Administration to reappoint only those whose offices were held by them before they were dismissed.
