When We Both Were Young.

Over, you were so young when you died,
Your heart was all thine and your mind
Was all thine;

And your soul was a young God taught me

One day;

Then I knew the thrill of the dead;

But you died—

And only the song I had learned could

Say—

Over, I am old, the old ways among,
Summer and winter are one to me;

Sure when I look out of life and see

Your love for my love when we both were

Young;

And now no—

The fondlyest dream that there can be;

Love, when we meet will you be as you were,

And I am—Now, will both be young;

For the song God taught me, I've always

Sung;

Life it all that I am—I was your soul here;

Death for our love when we both were

Young;

—Hazel Davis, in Home Queen.

HUMOROUS.

"You need not speak so very loud," said the judge to the prisoner; "justice may be blind, but it isn't deaf."

Teacher.—Have you learned the Golden Rule, Tommy? Tommy.—Yes, I do. It helps other people like they would be yourself.

But my cousin just —I'm afraid you'd think so, Mr. Jones! The cousin.—Our new neighbor, I suppose? Parts of it are excellent!

Fox Author.—Have you heard that our cousin, Snuffles, has married? Second Author.—Yes, he wanted to double his circle of readers!

Sue.—I hope you can come next Thursday. We're having some impromptu and a supper after. Mr.—O—yes, I'll come but —I may be late.

How do you bear up in the scenes of joy and sorrow?

—I want to say you have a blanche order for some flowers."

The clerk looked at him and continued talking to the young woman.

—I am in a desperate hurry; must catch a train—the time to lose—and will give you a blanche order for some flowers."

The young woman responded to wait, and the clerk replied:

—What kind would you like?

—No matter what they are, so they are handsome—roses and other things—something pretty, for her to wear," he answered, as he moved towards the flowers. "And I give you carte blanche."

Snuffles was qualche la partie blonde that the salesmen seemed to express, and asked the address.

—X— West Seventh street, and I have the number 87—old—no—no—going out. Something blanche, and roses too?" With these words he put down his case and slammed the door, and was off.

The clerk looked at the young woman and said:

—Are these blanches pink, or pale, and roses—24 roses?"

—X— "I want," she barked, "make it right for the girl and nothing but things—something pretty, for her to wear," he answered, as he moved towards the flowers. "And I give you carte blanche."

Snuffles was qualche la partie blonde that the salesmen seemed to express, and asked the address.
