Give Hogs Plenty of Salt.

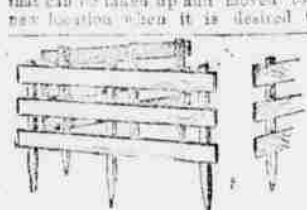

Hogs should have free access to salt. When on pasture, put in some dry place under a shed where the hogs can get at it whenever wanted. Some recommend spilling the salt into the soil, especially if it is clay, compelling the hogs to root for it.

Controlling the Caterpillar.

According to Professor Johnson, of the Maryland experiment station, the caterpillar may be controlled by the use of a mixture made by mixing five pounds of wheat bran with two quarts of molasses and one pound of Paris green with water enough to make a thick mash and distributing it among the plants attacked.

A Suitable Fence For Pigs.

The illustration shows a kind of fence made with which either small or large pigs can be made for pasturing large quantities of hogs in summer—a fence that can be taken up and moved to a new location when it is desired to move the occupants of the pen to new ground. The posts of each panel of fence extend about twenty inches below the ground and are secured by a sharp-pointed iron spike. The rails are made of split oak or other suitable material and are secured to the posts by iron spikes. The fence is made in panels, each panel being about ten feet long and four feet high. The panels are joined together by hinges, and the whole structure can be taken up and moved to a new location when it is desired to move the occupants of the pen to new ground.

Cheap Shelter For Cows.

Many farmers do not know how to make a barn or stable plan that is adapted to the wants of their own farm. They plan to build shelter for their stock when they have money enough to build just a barn. It is hard to make them believe they can do their own carpenter work, and for a few dollars put up a suitable Making Good Soap Grease.

In many towns there are all the scraps of fat and bones, unworked, are thrown away. A large tub or bucket, which is used for all the scraps, becomes a valuable object to the farmer. The soap grease can be made by boiling the scraps in water. The water should be changed often, and the soap grease should be filtered through a cloth. The grease will be found to be very good for use in the household.

Decorations of the Veranda.

The veranda is often made in plant life, and it is a very desirable habit of growing plants on the veranda. The plants should be chosen so that they will be in bloom at the same time. The plants should be placed in pots, and the pots should be placed on the veranda. The plants should be watered often, and the soil should be kept moist.

SUICIDES WITH ORIGINALITY.

Unusual Methods Employed by Them in Quitting the World.

The suicide of Count Karolyi is only one of many hundreds of cases of self-destruction in which it has been found impossible to assign sufficient cause for committing the act. The probability is that in 99 cases out of every 100 there never is sufficient cause, and that the life is taken in some fit of desperation or temporary insanity, as the coroners jury process to call it. Another curious fact about recent suicides is that nearly in all the methods of severing the link with life appears to have weighed considerably with the unhappy victims of disordered minds. Perhaps the most remarkable case on record is that of a man who, although in a position of great comfort and ease, one day resolved to end his life, and his method was so complicated that it took him nearly seven weeks to prepare for the deed. With his own hands he built himself a wooden scaffold, consisting of four corner supports and an upper staging. This he painted black, except the floor of the staging, which was blood red. Having accomplished this work, he dug a hole under the center of the staging, buried a highly explosive mine three feet underground so that it rested nine feet under the staging to which it was connected by wires for firing by electricity. He then wrote to the authorities explaining his arrangements and that in a certain time portion of his life would be scattered broadcast, and that the debt in which his scaffold was erected, being due to the field he placed himself on the mattress on the staging and touched the button which fired the mine. In the quantity of dynamite effect the side of a stone wall in a neighboring estate without parallel. The man had attempted to take his life by throwing himself into a river for which purpose he was charged with suicide, and sentenced to a year's imprisonment. A few weeks afterward he wrote to a friend living in the neighborhood saying he had resolved to make a further attempt upon his life and that he would do so in a manner which would insure any possibility of his being being forgotten. Within a few days of the date of that letter the body of the stepfather was seen lying from the summit of the highest peak in his town—a few feet below the summit. The body appeared to be a young man, and it was found that the man had taken his life in the manner described. The man had written to his friend saying that he had resolved to make a further attempt upon his life and that he would do so in a manner which would insure any possibility of his being being forgotten.

observes the New York Independent. It will be one of the great events of current history if Russia shall, as now proposed, decide to abolish transportation to Siberia. Amos, until it had ceased to be a Bannet Bay. The same was true two hundred years earlier in Virginia. Siberia is a land of magnificent possibilities, and the peaceful immigration of labor to that open field will make it a garden. It is the grandest open field in the world, and what has been accomplished in our own Western States can be accomplished under similar conditions of climate and soil in Siberia. To be sure the difference of government between the two countries is enormous, and has a great influence upon prosperity, but we may expect that there will be a great extension of immigration from this country to the prairies and forests of Northern Asia, and a very rapid increase of population.

The Car Window Again.

Faddy—You know how loving Tom and Miss Kuntz were? Well, she has thrown him over.

Daddy—How did it happen?

Faddy—Charley Fisher, who also has an eye on Miss Kuntz, saw her and Tom sitting in the car as happy as two turtles in love. He got a woman in the next seat to ask Tom if he would please open the window. Of course Tom tried to comply, and of course he failed miserably. That was too much for Miss Kuntz. A woman can't be expected to respect a man who has made himself ridiculous in public.
