

Four Days of Slow Strangulation.

Some days ago Detective Inspector Armstrong made a clever capture of the chief of the ruffians who have made the name of Pouting notorious. The prisoner in question, besides being a well known racketeer and jobber, was guilty of the horrible atrocity of smothering out two men's eyes. He was found guilty at the Mixed Court and sent into the Chinese city for punishment. It was expected that he would be decapitated, but afterwards news came into the settlement that he was to suffer death by slow strangulation. The process is one of a really barbarous nature, the prisoner standing with a close fitting cage around his neck in a cage of wicker bars some 6 feet 10 inches in height. On the bottom of the cage are flat slabs of stone on which his feet rest, and from day to day these slabs are removed until he is left helpless to the center. The slabs, which are placed in a spiral and slanted, work first inside the neck North side was covered by thousands of men, women and children. A few runners armed with canes, were the only order guards, and they stretched the yellow cord right down to the feet of the condemned man. The whole crowd, the principal men appearing to be of the highest rank of all. It was a very sad scene, and a most interesting one, with some women in the front directly in front of the prisoner, and others in the back. The great trouble in trying to sell what is called patent medicine is that so many people have had a taste for them that they don't believe what honest druggists say. We have been telling our story for years. Did we ever deceive you? If we make any statement that isn't so we will stand the loss. Go to the druggist and get your money back.

Here's an example. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a good cure for a cough that comes from a cold. Your cough, if you have one, may not come from a cold; your doctor will tell you about that.

It is a straight medicine with sixty years of cures back of it. There isn't a ghost of the ordinary patent thing about it.

Good Roads Poles.

Statistics That Convince.

The splendid road conditions existing on the continent of Europe can be duplicated here. The question is, how can this be done? The question is, how can this be done? The question is, how can this be done?

For example, writes General Roy Stone, in the New York Journal, I heard that there were some expensive good stone roads being constructed in the State of New York. I went there myself, and to my surprise I found that the roads were not so good as they were supposed to be.

They said, "We started to build a road, but we found that the soil was not good enough for it. We had to use a different material, and the road was not so good as we had hoped it would be."

An Indiana Freak.

Indiana has a freak pet of its own which is likely to attract some attention. J. M. Fippen and W. V. Foster, of Ripon, are the parties to the bet. If Indiana goes for Bryan Mr. Foster is to meet Mr. Fippen on the court house square at 12 o'clock, election night, take off the coat, trousers and vest, and present them to his Democrat friend. With an appropriate speech which must not take less than twenty minutes in delivery. If Indiana goes for McKinley a majority Mr. Fippen is to do the absorbing act and make the speech of presentation.
