Moline Tractor

The Machine For the Farmer

Mr. Chas. B. Moore says of the Moline Tractor: "I have been using the Moline Tractor for some time. I plowed and harrowed around 100 acres at a cost of less than $1 an acre and also saved 100,000 feet of lumber at about $1.00 per 1,000. I have found it one of the best and cheapest pieces of machinery ever used on a farm.

"Last year with two horses I cultivated 35 acres of corn and cotton and had all I could attend to. This year I cultivated with the aid of the Moline Tractor 35 acres of cotton and 35 acres in corn and could have broken much more land."

"I was pale and thin, hardly able to go," says Mrs. Bessie Bearden, of Central, S. C. "I would suffer, when I stood on my feet, with bearing-down pains in my sides and the lower part of my body. I did not rest well and didn't want anything to eat. My color was bad and I felt miserable. A friend of mine told me of

AT MAY COURT

YOUNG GROUP OF OFFICERS.

Horton and Williams Making a Splendid Impression.

R. E. Powell, in Raleigh Times. Five officials, whose average age was less than thirty years, held the May, 1923, term of the Superior Court for the county of Lee.

They were: Judge J. Lloyd Horton, of Farmville, who presided, 30. Solicitor Clawson D. Williams, who prosecuted the docket for the State 34. Sheriff Landon C. Rosser, 27. Clerk of Court Duncan E. McIver, 27.

Miss Minnie Lee Hoover, stenographer, 25. The youthful five made a record in North Carolina, officials here at the capital believe. Judge Horton smashed the age record of the court nearly four years ago when he was elected judge. Solicitors as young as Clawson Williams have served in the State before but few of them ever smashed through what was generally believed to be an impregnable line to win the nomination.

And this court moved along with as much dispatch as any of them—in fact a little bit more. More courts like it would dissipate the walls about de North Carolina and so on and so forth. Few men in the public life of the State have, in so short a time, made the impression upon it as have Lloyd Horton and Clawson Williams.

In a more limited territory—that only of Lee county—is a record that any clerk and sheriff in the State would be jealous of. Duncan McIver, clerk, and Landon Rosser, sheriff, are 27 years old each and they are clean cut, clever, efficient office holders. They measure up with the first two attributes on first blush; their constituents testify to their worthiness as officials.

And so for Miss Minnie Lee Hoover, everybody in the State—she's been over most of it—knows she is the best little court stenographer that ever was. She pushes a pencil so fast the lead often melts. And the only witness who ever stumped her was Gaston Means and he stumped the whole works when he was on trial in Concord several years ago. Miss Hoover came from Asheboro, Congressman William Cicero Hammer's home town.

Duncan E. McIver is a kinsman of North Carolina's lamented educator. He is an alumnus of the University of North Carolina. He was appointed to fill an unexpired term in Lee in 1920 and was renominated and re-elected the same year. He has served about two and a half years.

Landon Rosser is a native of Bladen but he has more than made himself a citizen of Lee. A few years back (and this doesn't conflict with his statement of age) he was at State college where he was known as "Kid" Rosser. That, of course, implied that he was a scrapper. He's just as much of a terror to the blockaders now as he was to a freshman in his sophomore days at school.

The older young men, Judge Horton and Solicitor Williams, are better known to the State than these 27-year-old officers or this (we repeat) petite little steno of 25 summers.

Judge Lloyd Horton came into State wide prominence at the age of 24 when he ran for solicitor of his judicial district, embracing Pitt, Carteret, Craven, Pamlico and maybe another, and won by a big margin. Two years later he raised the ante and entered the race for judge, entering a contest against three or four old-timers. Just as his candidacy for solicitor was not taken seriously by the old guard, his ambition to be judge was even more discouraged.

Solicitor Clawson Williams, whose spectacular campaign against Solicitor Walter D. Siler is still the talk wherever politicians meet, is making a great record as a prosecutor in his district. He is winning favor with the folks all through his district because of the vigorous manner in which he deals with those who violate the law.

THE GRAHAM MEMORIAL.

Subscriptions Now Being Received for New Y. at University.

Chapel Hill, July 14.—According to an announcement made by the Graham Memorial committee of the University of North Carolina, plans have been perfected for the completion of the campaign funds for the building during the summer and 20 representatives of the student body and alumni are now at work throughout the State in the interest of the movement.

The purpose of the building is to provide a student activities center for the use of the student body and at the same time to do honor to the memory of Edward Kidder Graham, president of the University from 1914 to 1918. Subscriptions are being sought for in recognition of the fact that men are to be trained for effective participation in modern community life.

The need of such a building cannot be overstated. The present Y. built in 1904 when the student body numbered 500, is hopelessly inadequate for the 2,250 students to be enrolled.

The building, which will be of the late Georgian style of architecture, brick with limestone trimmings, will be located on the Old Inn site. It will face across the campus towards the Battle Vance-Pettigrew dormitories, with north and south extensions facing Franklin street and the walkway between the Inn and Alumni Building. The main entrance from the campus will be through a spacious portico into a large social room, 40 by 80 feet, on the first floor, capable of being used for a variety of purposes such as class and alumni banquets, meetings of the larger clubs, group singing and other general get-together activities.

In 1918 when the building was first proposed, the student body numbered 1,000, building prices were lower, and the present building reorganization of the University was three years in the future. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars was the objective set, of which $123,000 was subscribed, and $80,000 has been collected. To meet present requirements $400,000 will be required and subscriptions are being asked for on that basis.

In the more distant future, it will be possible to extend the buildings to the east. Ample space remains on the plot for the purpose and architects have drawn the plans so that extensions can be made in complete harmony with the plans of the building itself and the general scheme of campus development.

A Good Woman Gone.

On July 13th the death angel came into the home of Mrs. Frances Oldham and took her from earth to heaven. She was in her 82nd year and had been unable to walk for some time.

She was twice married, first to Wm. Burke. To that union was born one child and second to Marshal Oldham and to that union was born 8 children. All are living except one. All were at the funeral except one.

Mrs. Oldham was laid to rest at Antioch church of which she had been a member for 62 years. Her last husband preceded her to the grave 18 years before. She was loved by all who knew her.

Her mother lives in glory with the Lord for ever. Some sweet day I will meet her on that bright, eternal shore.

Numerous flint implements, bone harpoons, arrow heads, grindstones, chisels and tooth-headed spears have been discovered in the remains of a settlement at Holmegardsmos, Denmark. OBSERVATIONS.

By Rambler.

"I see by the papers that President Harding, wife and party are over in Alaska having a big time," remarked one of our citizens Tuesday. "I do hope he will have no bad luck and get full of buckshot. There are plenty of men in this country would kill him for a dollar or two. While I do not fancy the president and didn't vote for him, I hope he will come back to Washington in good health and spirits."

"Why it is," asked an old Pittsboro sinner, the other day, "that a man who reforms, joins the church and tries to be a big dog in church affairs is harder on his fellows than he was before he reformed? Can a man be reformed after all, when he opposes everything that he used to like to do himself? It seems to me if a man is willing to turn from his wicked ways he ought to try to help the chum he used to associate with instead of talking about and telling other people what a mean man his chum was and is. I like to see a man or woman tote fair with himself and his fellowman, even if he is trying to lead a better life."

"I don't think Pittsboro will ever have a theater in which shows and moving pictures could be shown," remarked a leading citizen. "Just think about it. To own a hall that will seat less than 500 people you have to pay a government tax of $50, besides the State and county. Any kind of wholesome amusement is beneficial to suffering humanity and should not be taxed but very little. A few years from now there will hardly be any kind of amusements allowed. People will have to do as the old lady told her son, for him to be a good boy during the week and Sunday she'd take him to the cemetery to see the tombstones. The rising generations are going to have a hard road to travel, if I am not mistaken."

Hard to Estimate.

"How many children have you?" said a tourist affably. "I dunno exactly," answered the tired looking woman. "You don't know?" "Not for certain. Willie's gone fishin'; Tommy's breaking a colt; George's borrowed his father's shotgun to go hunting an' Esmeralda Ann is thinkin' of elopin'. I never know how many I've got till supper time comes, so's I can count 'em."

The photo is by Whitley, of Raleigh.

Watch the Weeds.

We don't want Pittsboro citizens to regard us in the light of a "nag" and yet we feel it a duty we owe to the community in general to call attention to the heavy crop of weeds to be found growing in several places about town if no other reason than the fact that they look bad could be advanced for cutting them, that would be sufficient. But there is a greater and a more serious reason why it should be done, and without further delay.

Weeds breed disease. They offer a shelter for germ-carrying insects, flies and mosquitoes, and furnish them an ideal breeding place. Sections where weeds are kept cut do not have to contend with annoying insects like those places where the weeds are permitted to grow as they please, and where the scythe is never applied. Pride in your neighborhood ought to be strong enough to warrant an hour or so at cutting every few weeks, to say nothing of the benefit that will come through eliminating a place which, if left to grow, might breed the very insect that would start an epidemic of sickness. The fact that some one else has permitted them to grow even higher than the ones you are neglecting to cut is a poor alibi for you. No matter what the other fellow does—get busy and clean up your own property. It won't be long until he will fall into line.

We are well into the most dangerous period of the year. Let's not take chances on an epidemic that would bring sorrow into many homes, and that we would regret to the end of our days. Let's make war on the weeds and keep it up until fall.

THE CALL.

(By Henrietta Morgan.)

A call to Me comes in the evening wind,
From mountain and hill and plain,
'Neatn the tinted skies
Where the red sun dies,
And the stars creep forth again.

Down thru the ages of by-gone days,
Into the years to be,
It is ringing still,
Over vale and hill,
Over the world to me.

And my heart leaps up with an answering cry,
Born of this call of old,
And with wild desire,
My heart is on fire,
Under the skies of gold.

Oh, for a voice to carry it on,
To send it forth again,
In words of flame
This message that came,
Over the world to men.

To see and be silent. Hear and be dumb,
Bereft of words and weak,
Yet to know and to feel
Life's throbbing appeal,
Ah, but for a voice to speak.

Realistic.
