A car driven by a man named J. A. Savage, who lives on one of the routes out of Sanford, ran into a wagon last Friday, driven by the son of Rev. G. C. Roberts, colored, at the intersection of West and Fayetteville streets, and damaged the harness and one of the shafts of the wagon. The boy jumped out. Savage offered to pay for the damage, done as Roberts wanted $25.00, he refused to pay that sum and left town for his home.

OBSERVATIONS.
By Rambler.
"Our people seem to be quite backward," a citizen said last Thursday. "Here was a car load of prominent citizens at the depot, including our governor, who made a short speech, and not a citizen of the town welcomed them by voice or action."
"I see John Robinson's circus is going to be in Raleigh in a few days," remarked a Pittsboro lady to Dr. Chapin. "Do you think John Robinson will go to heaven when he dies?" she asked.
"Well," replied the doctor, "he has a good show."

"We are getting quite city like in having trials," said one of our citizens. "Thursday was a big day with the magistrates. One case was on trial all day and the lawyers and the J. P., not being satisfied, had to try one at night. Night courts does sound a little big, don't it?"
"I have been living in Pittsboro many years," remarked a citizen, "and have seen some strange things here, but the strangest thing I have yet seen is to go up town and not see a dog on the streets. A stitch in time saves nine, is an old saying, and a dog kept off the streets may save a life or a lot of trouble."

"When Pittsboro gets her cement street paved through the town," remarked a Pittsboroite, "some of these old timers who have been used to mud, kerosene lights and lightwood knots will be putting on airs. It took these people a long time to learn of the many advantages of electricity and paved streets, and now if even the lights were cut out these same old timers would be the first to squall out."

"What about that suggestion in last week's Record about getting up a play for the opening of the auditorium," was a question asked by a citizen.
"Don't know," answered another citizen. "A play calls for a lot of work and work nowadays is what people do not like to do. But if these people here cannot get home talent to do the work, they might send over to Brickhaven, Bynum or some other place and invite them to come over and give us a play."

"What would you do if you had six or seven bales of cotton to sell," a farmer asked a town man the other day. "Sell it just as soon as I could get it on the market," was the reply. "I know a farmer over in Baldwin township," continued the citizen, "who had ten-bags of cotton on hand. Cotton then was over 30 cents a pound. This farmer sold five of his bags but said he was going to hold the balance until it went to 50 cents. He was advised to sell all he had but he didn't and in a few weeks the price of cotton dropped to 15 cents. My advice is to sell it as fast as you can get it out."

VISIT TO N. M. BLAIR.
U. S. Blair Has More to Say About Trip to Ronda, Arkansas.

Dear Editor:—As so many people enjoyed what I said about my trip, I will write a few more lines. The people in Arkansas were nice and clever everywhere we went, and my wife and I, sister and son, Edward, certainly did enjoy the kindness and hospitality shown us.

When we returned from Helena on Thursday afternoon at 6 o'clock, they gave us a big surprise. The first to greet us were Dr. Bradley and family, Dr. White and family and then lots of other friends, numbering 162 in all. They had full baskets of everything good to eat. A table 50 feet long was prepared and the good women soon had the meal ready, while the young girls played the piano. Then in answer to a phone call, which I answered, Mr. Adams and wife and son, from Wriana, asked that the supper wait until they could get there. After they arrived, Mr. Howard led in prayer and the folks were told to begin to eat. They did good justice to it too.

I certainly did hate to leave, but we started the next day on our journey of North Carolina. After leaving Ronda for Murina and from there to Memphis, Tennessee. We stayed there until 5 o'clock and took in the sights of that city. It is some big town. We went to the zoo where we saw all sorts of animals from all parts of the world.

My wife and sister thought the greatest sight was the train running into a boat and being carried across the Mississippi river at Helena. This town also is a big place. We left Memphis by way of Chattanooga, Knoxville and Morristown. We rode all night through Mississippi and Alabama back into Tennessee. The scenery was beautiful. There was large pastures full of fine cattle, sheep and hogs. In many places there were as many as 400 and 500 head of sheep and hogs. From Morristown we came to Asheville, North Carolina, down through the mountains. We saw the river for 30 miles. Our next stop was Greensboro. We spent the night there with a cousin.
