YOUTH AND ITS AMBITIONS

A writer in a current magazine says that a generation or so ago boys invariably desired to become rich men. Their whole aim and ambition in life was to be wealthy, they appreciating in some measure what money is able to do. Now, however, their ambitions tend in other directions. They have learned that the man who achieves, who contributes something to well-being and the progress of humanity, is more highly appreciated than the one who simply gains riches. They have been impressed with what Andrew Carnegie said, "He who dies rich dies disgraced," and with what Dr. Hillis said, "The man who writes a lasting epitaph must write it with something besides dollars."

The truth of these observations were forcibly impressed upon the writer's mind the other evening, as he entered a home and, while waiting, conversed with a lad. The boy stood before the fire, his hands behind his back, deeply immersed in thought, and when asked what was puzzling him, replied: "What I shall do in life." Asked what he wanted to do, he said, "I want to do something that will enable me to leave behind me when I am gone continuous evidence that I lived." "But what shall that be?" I asked, to which he replied, "Washington left an independent nation; the framers of the constitution an instrument of government better than that possessed by any other people; Lincoln, the emancipation of slavery; Grant, a re-united country; Morse, the telegraph; Stevenson, the locomotive; Marconi, the wireless telegraph; Bell the telephone, and Edison, Westinghouse and thousands of others inventions of use and benefit to mankind."

Just then the boy's father appeared but his answer had indicated to me the truth of what I had just been reading—evidence of the fact that the development of thought during the last decade had reached the boys and set them to thinking along new lines. Yes, youthful ambitions have changed. They have been changed by teaching in the home, by the influence of the church, by the direction of the school. Today most boys do not regard wealth as an end but as a means to an end—some end that will be really worth while. This is one of the most hopeful signs of the times, and a splendid promise for the New Year. A generation hence some magazine writer will doubtless be able to observe the results of such ambition and the benefits to humanity.

Frequent Headaches

"I suffered with chronic constipation that would bring on very severe headaches," says Mrs. Stephen H. Kincer, of R. F. D. 1, Cripple Creek, Va. "I tried different medicines and did not get relief. The headaches became very frequent. I heard of and took it for a headache, and the relief was very quick, and it was so long before I had another headache. Now I just keep the Black-Draught, and don't let myself get in that condition."

Theford's Black-Draught (purely vegetable) has been found to relieve constipation, and by stimulating the action of the liver, when it is torpid, helps to drive many poisons out of your system. Biliousness, indigestion, headache, and similar troubles are often relieved in this way. It is the natural way. Be natural! Try Black-Draught.
