OBSERVATIONS

By Rambler.

"What will women do next?" asked a citizen the other day. "I see in a paper that out in Alabama a school board, composed of women, have ordered that all teachers, men and women must bob their hair. I never heard of the like. I believe it was fashionable, that some women would cut off their toes in order to make their feet smaller."

"My wife asked me the other night what I thought of show people and those that were here last week in particular," said a townsman. And she wanted to know if show people went to heaven. I told her I didn't know but the man here last week had a mighty good show."

"People are not like they used to be," remarked an old gentleman. "Here is a lady that is living in the same square with my wife, but she won't visit her because my wife does not live in the same circle with this lady. Why it is getting to be if you don't belong to some society, you are not in it. In my younger days people were sociable and visited one another, but they don't do it now."

One can obtain young onions now the year round. Never was civilization so high.

QUERY DEPARTMENT.

Answers by John

Will it ever come to pass that a pedestrian will either have a car or wings.—Laura, Bell's school.

Answer—I expect so. Either way he will be traveling on high.

A doctor says that safety pins have killed more babies than fire arms. Is it true? Julia, Bynum.

Answer—Guess it's a fact. Shooting babies with fire arms has long gone out of fashion.

Who wrote, "After the Bawl?"—Daisy, Moncure.

Ans.—It was written by Halter Wanks for a baby after he had given it a stick of candy to make it stop crying.

What is a jay walker? I have often heard the expression used.—Matilda, Siler City.

Ans.—A jay walker, Matilda is a fool who walks across the street and is struck by an automobile by a fool driver. He then is no longer a jay walker or any other kind of a walker.

I am an eighty five year old school girl and am terribly frightened. I have been told that the world is soon to come to an end.—School Girl, Corinth.

Answer—Don't let any such stories frighten you. You will have plenty of time to bob your hair, get married and live happy ever after. The world cannot come to an end any way. It is round.

THE WISE OLD OWL TOLD ME

Billy had just been presented with a fine violin by his daddy and was soon to begin taking lessons. He fondled and examined the new instrument carefully. The two funny little openings beneath the strings of the violin interested him greatly.

"Daddy what are these two holes here for? It seems to me the sound would be better if there weren't any holes at all."

As usual, the Wise Old Owl was on hand and interrupted before Billy's father could even open his mouth to answer.

"The S-shaped sound-holes are of the greatest importance in regulating the tone of the violin. Sounds depend upon vibrations of the air, and if the air in the body of the violin had no way of escape the tone would have a weak and muffled effect."

"In the long history of the violin various types of sound holes have been tried, but after long and laborious experiment, Stradivarius (the greatest violin maker in history) proved this particular shape best, and for the last two centuries the shape has been universally adopted."

SNYDER HAS AN OPPONENT.

Both are After The Coveted Job of Canal Driver.

(By JOE SNYDER.)

I am after a big job and I hope to be elected to the office of canal driver on the State's new shipping line. I have been trying to draw the attention of the good people of this county, especially the lady voters, (God bless them; I wish there were more of them,) to the fact that I have long been secretly at work to get this office although I have heard that my old friend Will Ward, was after the same office. I must say that Mr. Ward is too young, (somewhere in the neighborhood of 95 years,) to hold down a most responsible position as canal driver. I have talked to that gentleman and tried to persuade him out of the notion to run or walk for it. He tells me that he is as good a democrat as I am, a good party man, a good Bailey man and a good man anyhow, and that he wants the job, even if he does wear No. 11 shoes. He says he wants an office; that he is bound to have an office as he is tired of work and loafing about the country.

There is no doubt but that my competitor is a good man, is a handsome man and there's where he has got me beat, if I do say it myself. I am sorry I was born so out of shape, but I couldn't help being born that way, although I was there at the great calamity. If my ma and pa had been good looking people, I have no doubt but I would have been a handsome man.

I have the advantage of Mr. Ward. I know Mr. Bailey and I know Mr. Morrison. He does not, and I have smaller feet than he has. Besides that I wash my feet now and then and we do not know if he ever washes his'n.

Well, be as it may, I am going to do my darndest to get this job, and I have enlisted all the ladies in this section to help me out, and ugly as I am, they say they will help me out.

Now, I'll see what my competitor is going to do, and if he begins to do too much, then I'll use the money I hope to get from the Edwards estate but have no hope of it in buying ice cream, peanuts and such for my constituency.
