RUNNING BOARDING HOUSE

Story of a Woman Who Thought She Knew It All.

Can a woman do big things like men? Yes, some of them can. One woman in a hundred is quicker to see big ideas than most men, but the other ninety nine prefer to let George do it.

Old Mrs. Bullywinkle was the one woman in Gap's Ridge, a little Chatham village, who thought she knew it all, her husband a poor little dried up man henpecked to the last degree, didn't know anything as his big, fat wife said, but eat and sleep.

Mrs. Bullywinkle thought she could make lots of money taking in boarders at so much per week, and told her husband so. Of course Bullywinkle objected. He was making a salary large enough to take care of both of them and have some to spare to put in the bank.

The old man knew enough to look out for a rainy day, even if it never rained, and also to keep out of debt, even if he was a dried up, ugly, son-of-a-gun, and he knew his wife had big ideas of making money, living high, wearing fine clothes and trying to get into the "Sassiety" of the town, and he tried to out talk her. Nothing doing, and the boarding house

Seven or eight young men engaged board right away, and right then poor old Bullywinkle was ignored. His wife paid as much attention to him as if he had been a butterfly in the open air.

The first week all the boarders paid up. Forty eight dollars! And the old lady counted her money over and over again.

"I knew I could make money keeping boarders," she told her husband.

The old man sighed and said nothing. He knew how it was going to end, was opened.

This kept up for a month, and still the gang paid their bills. Then bills for groceries began to pour into the old man. He didn't know what to make of it. He thought his wife was paying cash for all she bought.

"Look here, Mrs. Bullywinkle," he said to his wife. "What does this mean?" and he forthwith pulled out a handful of bills and showed her.

"Well you know I had to have several new dresses and new bonnets in order to be up to date with such a nice lot of young men boarders and I have used the money to buy clothes. You keep your mouth out of my business or else you can go and get you a boarding place somewhere else," said the woman.

The old man took her at her word, drew all of his money out of the bank and left town and left the bills unpaid.

Mrs. Bullywinkle ran her boarding house for a few weeks longer. Half of the young men finally quit, leaving her in debt, and the other half wouldn't pay her. The butcher, the grocer and dressmaker refused to credit her and she finally gave up and wondered what had become of her absent husband.

She had to sell her frocks, her jewelry, her bonnets and her furniture, and when it was all over old Mrs. Bullywinkle had nowhere to go, all her friends had forsaken her, because she had treated her husband so bad.

The old man kept track of her though friends and finally came back to her, settled up all the bills, bought new furniture and lived ever happily thereafter.

The above goes to show that while some women are smart and can make both ends meet, this one couldn't and didn't.

STRANGE AND CURIOUS.

Peculiarities That Will Astonish Almost Anyone.

A boy in Laporte, Ind., cursed his father and the mayor fined him $1 and costs.

Anderon, Ind. girls are boycotting barbers who charge 75 cents for bobbing their hair.

A community church at Durange, Cal., is built of material from a dance hall, saloon and brewery.

A fleeing rum runner, of Morrow, Ga., wrecked three cars with his machine. He was finally captured.

Ralph W. Uphan, of Cincinatti, has only one year to live, says his doctor. He recently obtained a divorce from his wife.

It took 39 years for a piece of needle to go from a woman's arm in Little valley, N. Y. to her knee. There it was removed.

After twenty years of barbering Anthony Gallo of Attleboro, Mass., quit shaving men and now bobs women's hair for a living.

Rusia has a wonder child. He is four years and ten months old and has a full beard. He is able to throw a man in wrestling match.

A RIVER PUT TO WORK.

For centuries the Catawba River rolled its waters calmly through North and South Carolina to the sea. Indians and white men fished in it, and used it as a means of travel with their canoes, but until some 20 years ago, the aid of the mighty giant that slept beneath those waters was not invoked by mankind.

But today the Catawba River is turning the wheels of 300 cotton mills, and keeping five million spindles busy turning cotton into cloth. There are now nine waterpower stations on the Catawba with a capacity of 420,000 horsepower and a storage capacity of 175,000,000,000 gallons of water. According to A. C. Lee of the engineering staff of the Southern Power Company, "the Catawba River, with two new developments now under construction, will probably be the finest example in America of the intensive and intelligent development of a great natural resource."

Much of this development has come in the last decade. In 1915 the waters of the Catawba were furnishing the power for only 11 cotton mills with less than 175,000 spindles. Today in addition to the 300 mills served, numerous other industries are provided with power, and many cities and towns of the section are furnished with electricity for lighting and other domestic uses.

The Catawba presents the spectacle of a mighty river completely harnessed, or nearly so, to perform the labor of mankind. There are hundreds of other streams in this and other sections of the country that have similar possibilities. To place their powers at man's service is one of the most important and necessary tasks of invested capital of the next decade.—Greenville, S. C., News.

The silent woods are calling

CALLING you to play hooky as they did when you were a kid. Remember the old swimming hole, the wild adventures in caves and woods, the thrills of catching your first fish?

Your nature still wants to play hooky once in a while. It's easy too. Easier than it was in your schooldays. Plan your work ahead so you can take a day off. Hop in the car bright and early. Go off for a day's golf or hunting or better yet take the wife and family along for an outing in the autumn woods.

Forget your business for just a few hours. You'll work all the better next day. Your vision will be clearer, your mind keener. Your point of view will be changed. And you will find it restful to get out on the road on a week day when there is less traffic.

Better run 'round tonight to the nearest "Standard" pump and fill her up with gas, oil, air, and water. Then you'll be ready for an early start and a steady run. "Standard" is just the gas you need on early morning trips like these for there may be a touch of frost in the air. That's when you need peppy gas.
