The Poe Literary Society had a very interesting program Monday afternoon. Joe Hammock opened the program with a series of jokes which greatly amused his hearers. Next was current events by James Thomas who showed that he had read extensively for his information. Eugene Partin and Floyd White gave declamations which all enjoyed. A debate followed. The question discussed was: Resolved that Washington was a greater man than Wilson. Clarence Johnson and Wyeth Ray were team captains. Clarence Johnson opened the debate with an able discussion of Washington's ability as a general. Wyeth Ray, captain for the negative, with great fervor, argued that Wilson lived in a more complex age and proved himself a greater man than Washington.

The debaters which followed were: Affirmative: Sam Beard, Lennie Neal, Willie Morgan, Ralph Riddle Edward Ward, Junius Durham, Negative: Roland Farrell, Brooks Snipes, Dan Farrell, Lester Farrell William Wright, Lewis Carroll.

The Elizabeth Browning Literary Society met Monday afternoon, the 29th in the school auditorium. The girls could not be thoroughly understood because of the excessive rain which was falling while the program was being rendered. Those who took part were: Camilla Powell, Carrie Burns, Mary Sue Poe, Nannie Lanus, and Martha Ray. Patrons of the school will be interested in the enrollment this year. It stands at present.
