Chatham county should not have to buy a ton of feed next year. A dollar saved is more than made. Stop the outpour of dollars for hay, oats, etc. Plant winter crops. There is no time to waste. Just as soon as the ground is wet enough to plow, the lands should be prepared. It will likely be too wet within a short while, and the season too far advanced. The next three weeks should be the busiest in the history of the county. Corn will remain in the field without serious injury. Let the farmers get busy on the important thing that cannot be postponed. It has been demonstrated this year that a fair crop of corn can be raised after the time for gathering small grain. There will be little need for cotton land next year. Therefore farmers may plant their best land in winter crops, and then plant late crops after harvest next June. It is not only a matter of getting through this year. It is a matter of planning to make the farm profitable next year. Not a minute is to be lost.

The writer was much interested in being shown the first book of Chatham county records, beginning with the foundation of the county in 1770. William Hooper, a resident of Hillsboro, was the first clerk, and page after page of the book is inscribed in that celebrated patriot's hand, a strong, smooth cursive, and as legible today as if it had been written a year ago instead of 156 years ago. He was followed as clerk by Joel Lane, the man whose farm was bought for the location of the state capital. That distinguished gentleman, too, wrote clearly and legibly. The third clerk was William Alston. We suggest that the United States and North Carolina history teachers in the school bring their classes over to the court house and get Judge Walter Siler to show them some of the historic documents in the archives. A good question for each child right off hand when you read this is, What made William Hooper famous?

Destruction was abroad last week. A great storm destroyed hundreds of lives in Cuba and millions of property, while in Armenia a terrific earthquake took great toll of life and property. The Red Cross constantly has calls upon it for relief. Note the call for membership and join if you yourself are not needy.

There are greater honors but none more fittingly awarded than that bestowed upon Mrs. B. N. Duke in the naming of one of the literary societies in Pineland Junior College the Mary Duke Society. To the benefaction of B. N. Duke that school and several other small schools owe their larger existence. In fact, if it hadn't been for the thousands of dollars B. N. Duke bestowed upon Trinity College in its leaner days, there wouldn't have been so much Trinity to benefit from the millions of J. B. Duke.

The election is at hand. Go out and vote and keep your interest alive. There are great principles to come before the people sooner or later, even if there seems to be no means at present for a Chatham voter to do more than register his vote for his choice for the several offices.

It is strange how one can scarcely escape some folk and altogether miss others for years. This writer heard Vance speak three or four times before the former was 21 years old. Jarvis was a comparatively familiar figure. Though out of the state 14 years, yet the writer has had the privilege of knowing nearly all the older statesmen of North Carolina. Yet there have been two notable exceptions. Till today we have never laid eyes upon F. M. Simmons, an till last Thursday had never seen E. W. Pou, though the writer and he were reared in adjoining counties. Probably the best is saved for the last. Certainly, we were delighted with the mental qualities of Mr. Pou when we heard him Thursday. Mr. Pou, judging by a tribute in Ashe's history to the elder E. W. Pou, of reconstruction days, comes honestly by his mental strength and moral integrity.

Add another million bales to the surplus stock of cotton. A real effort is being made to effect plan for storing several millions of bales for two years and securing pledges to cut the crop 25 per cent. next year. Whether this is done or not, it will be only a fool who will depend to the usual extent upon cotton next year. If the surplus shall be stored, another big crop would ruin prices for the 1927 crop as well as prevent the sale of the surplus of the 1926 crop. Consequently, a short cotton crop next year is necessary. But the Chatham county farmer must look ahead. He wants to utilize his land and his time. Now is the time to begin. Plant plenty of winter grain and feed crops.

Dr. W. W. Faison, superintendent of the Eastern Insane Asylum for Negroes at Goldsboro, is dead. Dr. Faison was an old-fashioned gentleman. Moreover, he was not only a competent official but a self-sacrificing one. His was no sinecure. His position meant work and unpleasant work. But he achieved gloriously. Not one whisper of scandal has ever been breathed about the management of the Eastern Insane Asylum. That institution had to do on less per capita than the institutions for the whites, we believe. It took good management to make ends meet, but they met. The good doctor was of the good old Sampson county family of his name.

The latest government estimate of the cotton crop is 17,454,000 bales, the most ever made in the country. Of this huge crop only half was ginned up to Oct. 15. It is quite certain that much of the crop will remain in the fields if the present price of 11 cents continues. Even in Lee county the Express reports tenants leaving the farms with cotton unpicked, as there is nothing in it for them. Yet it is difficult to see what all the folk would do if they should decide that picking cotton pays too little.

Fortunately, Chatham folk are insured to hard times. The two former bad crops has taught many of them how to skip through. Besides, Chatham's woods are still ready to furnish crossties and cedar poles. Another fortunate thing is that many who have formerly bought on a credit, have either paid cash this year or done without. In fact, the Record feels more confident than last year. It has seen the people pull through under exceedingly trying circumstances, and believes they will do it again. Faith, hope, economy, and working like the mule will greatly aid at this crisis.

We realize that it will be difficult for many farmers to pay for seed and fertilizer to plant wheat, oats, rye, barley, vetch, clover, etc. But it is possible, plant liberally, even without commercial fertilizer.

Debs is dead. He was a man unshaken in his stand for what he conceived to be right. When indicted for obstructing the draft, he submitted to the charge gracefully and went to the penitentiary without whining. La Follette would have been in the same predicament, very probably, if he hadn't been a senator, but the test of practical political and social ostracism was about as severe for La Follette as the penitentiary door was for Debs. La Follette "came back" and only death prevented his becoming a greater power than ever. Debs dies with the respect of the American people. In the long run, whatever you may think of opinions, you are bound to respect the man who stands unflinchingly for what he deems right.

We welcome to our desk the Hillsboro Recorder. That old town again has a paper.

Some of the newspaper folk are snorting because a job printers has been escaused at the penitentiary to do printing for the institution and for the state. Convicts, if they work at all, must come in competition with free labor, and it would just as well be the printers as the farmers. The convict labor of the South has added many thousands of bales to the cotton crop this year. If the printers in prison can help lower the expenses of the state, let them go to it. Besides, here is an opportunity for bright young prisoners to learn a trade.

Carrboro to Have Water and Sewers.

(From the Chapel Hill Weekly)
The town of Carrboro, Chapel Hill's next-door neighbor to the west, is going rapidly ahead with the construction of a new water and sewer system.

The contract has been let to the Burlington Construction Company, and this concern has already put its force into action. The work will go on through the fall and winter.

Recently the Carrboro aldermen authorized a bond issue of $80,000 to cover the water and sewer pipes, a standpipe, and a sewage disposal plant. The amount of the contract is several thousand dollars under that figure, so that there appears to be a safe margin.

The water is to be purchased from the University, which, through its Consolidated Service Plants, owns and conducts the water supply system in Chapel Hill. The water will be filtered in the University's present plant and will be piped out to Carrboro. Some water is already being piped out to Carrboro, and arrangements have been made for the laying of such new mains as are needed.

The disposal plant is to be in the Morgan creek valley, out to the southwest of Chapel Hill. A week or so ago a delegation from Carrboro appeared before the aldermen here and proposed that the two municipalities join their two sewer systems; Carrboro's northern section to empty into Chapel Hill's existing line and Chapel Hill to lead its sewers from the Pittsboro road section into the new Morgan creek valley disposal plant. But a committee of the Chapel Hill board after a study of this plan, reported against it, deciding that the way of the land was such that Chapel Hill could provide, more economically, its own outfall from the Pittsboro road section.
