New Treatment for Chicken Pox

Chicken pox, or sorehead, often causes a large loss among chickens. According to Dr. E. F. Kaupp, in an article in the October 15 issue of The Southern Planter, the disease usually attacks the birds under one year of age. Older ones are usually immune.

When the disease occurs on the comb, face, and wattles, it is called chicken pox; and when it occurs in the mouth, it is known as canker, according to Dr. Kaupp.

Recently, a new treatment has been discovered for the control of this disease. It has been found to be very satisfactory. It should be used in place of the old treatment. In reference to the treatment, The Southern Planter article states:

"The former method of vaccination by making an injection under the skin with a hypodermic syringe did not give satisfactory results. Now vaccination is done on the skin much as human beings are vaccinated against smallpox.

"The most ideal time to vaccinate against pox and canker is when the pullets and cockerels needed for another year's breeding are on range. Birds may be vaccinated at six weeks of age, but from 12 to 15 weeks of age is more advisable. The hens may be vaccinated later, if pox appears. When the pullets are taken from the range house to the laying house they may be treated for worms and vaccinated at the same time. Vaccination may throw laying birds slightly out of lay but they will soon recover. For this reason, they should be vaccinated in the summer time."

The seat in the United States senate, denied to William S. Vare last week because of violation of the corrupt practices act in his election, has been given by Governor Fisher of Pennsylvania to Joseph Grundy. Grundy is the man who said lately that states which paid little into the federal treasury ought not to have representation in the senate. He raised nearly a million dollars for the Coolidge campaign, about as much for Hoover and has lately figured prominently in tariff lobby investigations. Senator Nye of North Dakota, insurgent republican, says he will challenge Grundy's right to a seat.
