Proving Her Point

If I get the drift on this woman-business all the way down from the Garden of Eden to the city park, woman has been trying to prove her point. She wishes to convince the world that she is indeed the female of the species!

Man has had the same idea, but it has worked in different ways. He has assumed that he could prove his point by fighting battles and building cities.

But woman has had to go of the point of life in her own way. Man wants to discover the North pole. Woman will be satisfied if she can find a husband. For it is the husband who proves the point in woman's life.

This idea in woman's brain has emphasized the importance of matrimony. Woman herself has been so stuck on the idea of being "The Wife" that she has consented to be one among a large number, as in the days of Solomon or Brigham Young.

To be the wife of a Grade A husband is the laudable ambition of any woman, but just to be wife, along with a lot of other deluded dames, is another matter. But woman doesn't marry for the sake of getting a man. She marries for the sake of getting married.

The crown worn by Queen Elizabeth or the diara of the star actress is all right in its way, but the average woman prefers a wedding ring, even when it has to be bought on the installment plan. She wants to prove her point, and the ring is the token of that victory.

But we are getting more sensible in these days of the self-supporting woman, and are putting a kick in the title, "Miss." In the old days, the "Miss" was the thing that the woman wished to get rid of as soon as possible.

Woman can now prove her point in other than matrimonial ways. The altar used to be our goal, but now the Big Dipper is the limit, for we can go as far as we like.

If we can't get a man to pay the rent and fill the place with tobacco smoke, we can do these things ourselves. If we can't find a man to lead around, it's always possible to get a dog on a string.

Woman proved one point in her life when she set up housekeeping, but she is proving another now that she has gone into business.

It's a pity that, with all our modern inventions, we can't manufacture some new aim for woman's life, but this is the thing she's doing for herself.

Wales may come down off his high horse occasionally, but those who associate with him here never will.

The Spirit of Easter

How lovely is Easter,
The Queen of the Spring,
What gladness and joy
Its coming can bring;
It holds a rich promise
As bright as the flowers
That break into beauty
And bloom through its hours

O, glad is the world
On this brightest of days,
When nature joins mankind
In glad songs of praise;
For no heart can be heavy,
No heart can stay cold,
As its sunshine envelopes
Each pathway with gold.

How lovely is Easter,
What dreams it can bring,
It holds all the joy
Of the newly-waked spring.
As through its glad music
We hear angels say:
"The Lord has arisen—
Death is conquered today."

Bre'r Rabbit Long Friend of Children

A little animal known as Bre'r Rabbit handles all of the business incident to the delivery of Easter eggs to the children. He builds nests, colors eggs and does all of the general work necessary to youthful happiness. Of course, you may believe the Easter rabbit a modern institution. We think his popularity is of comparatively recent promotion but—say, listen—Bre'r Rabbit was in the egg trade centuries before Joel Chandler Harris ever made Georgia famous, says William Herschell, writing in the Indianapolis News.

Want to know about Bre'r Rabbit as an Easter institution? Well, tradition reports that this versatile little egg distributor was in business before the Christian era. He has surrounded himself with many legends that date back into the pagan era, long before the birth of Christ, yet Easter eggs are supposed to symbolize the Resurrection and the rebirth of nature.

As one ranges back through history and tradition the connection of the rabbit with Easter becomes more mysterious. Here is one story, there is another. They seem at counterpoint, and one may toy with the different legends as he chooses. Sue Brady, delver into mythology, says:

Why the Easter Bunny?

"Into the beauty of Easter symbolism the Easter rabbit and the load of brightly-colored eggs which he carries for good children hops as a sort of quaintly comic relief. Why, ask the curious, should a sleek, fat bunny and colored eggs be connected with a festival which celebrates the resurrection of Jesus Christ? There seems at first glance to be no possible relation between this picturesque whimsy and the great spiritual significance of the day.

"Yet, all over the world the Easter rabbit and the eggs which he brings are, to the children at least, as important to the celebration as masses and anthems and church chimes.

"In Germany we see Hans and Gretchen hold him in almost as great veneration as they do Kris Kringle, for, like the jolly Christmas saint, he only visits good children. In Russia grownups as well as children greet each other on Easter Sunday and for seven days thereafter with an exchange of colored eggs. In Italy on Easter eve, pious families carry great bowls full of eggs to the priest for his blessing. Easter morning these bowls surrounded by decorations adorn the center of the table. During the week any visitor who may drop in eats an egg with the hostess.

Egg Hunts Popular.

"In England and the United States egg hunts are popular. One of the major national events of the year to the children in Washington, is the egg rolling on the grounds of the White House under the watchful eyes of the President and the First Lady of the Land.

"A dusty scroll preserved in the Tower of London contains the household accounts of Edward I of England. One entry made shortly before Easter is for eighteen pence (thirty-six cents) to buy 400 eggs for the Easter celebration in the royal household. Outside of the purely economic interest to the student of comparative prices, this item indicates to a certain extent the age of our modern custom.

"But none of these explain the why of the custom. As a matter of fact, the origin of the rabbit and the eggs is very difficult to trace. Most festival customs have some specific person or event to which they can be attributed. Not so the rabbit. The process by which he attached himself to Easter and gained a lasting affection in the hearts of millions of children is obscure and the only explanations which can be offered for him are pretty far-fetched."

William S. Walsh, nationally known authority on mythology, was asked to give his version of the origin of the Easter rabbit. He made this report: "The connection between Easter and the hare springs from the hare's connection with the moon. Easter, since its date depends on the moon, is in a sense, a lunar holiday. Now from very ancient times the hare has been a symbol for the moon. There are many reasons for this. A few only need be given. The hare is a nocturnal animal and comes out at night to feed. The female carries her young for a month, thus representing the lunar cycle.

Hare and the Moon.
"Both hare and moon were thought to have the power of changing their sex. The new moon was masculine, the waning moon feminine. But a more important reason for the identification of the hare with the moon lay in the fact that its young are born with their eyes open, unlike rabbits, which are born blind.

"The name of the hare in Egyptian was 'un,' meaning 'open.' Now, the moon was the open-eyed watcher of the skies at night and the hare, born with open eyes, was fabled never to close them; hence the identification of the open-eyed hare with the full moon. The old principle of cure-by sympathies led to the prescription in early English folklore of the brains and eyes of the hare as a cure of somnolency.

WHAT IS AN OPTIMIST?

We asked our friend Si Chestnut. He said: "An optimist is the fellow who buys shares in an oil company that hasn't even a hole in the ground."

That's the trouble with a good many of these so-called "investments." They are not investments at all, but they exist because they are profitable to the sharks who PROMOTE them. It pays to consult your banker when wanting to obtain good securities. Take no chances on any of these get-rich-quick schemes. They are operated for one purpose—to get your money.

—this long lasting Mower

THE CASE-OSBORNE Mower takes first rank in popularity and long-lasting services—you never saw a smoother-running, more economical and thoroughly dependable machine. Cuts fast and clean through all kinds of crops, heavy or light—over rough or smooth ground—and keeps it up day after day with little or no attention. All non-essential parts are eliminated—its extremely simple construction is the result of many years experience in building first class haying machinery. Working parts are oversized to insure steady running. Pitman bearings are of bronze, well lubricated—and easily replaceable. The internal gear drive—supplying more steady, positive drive power with less wear on the parts. A special eccentric device always keeps cutter bar in proper alignment. Underslung construction reduces friction on cutting parts. The Case-Osborne is an extremely light running mower. It's worth your time to see this popular mower. Come in today.

New Methods Adopted In Chilean Industry

Production of Nitrate Fertilizer in Sun-Parched Desert Is Speeded Up.

AMERICAN engineers are helping to revolutionize an industry up in the sun-parched mountains of northern Chile. The application of modern methods of mass production is making the Chilean nitrate industry a model of 20th century efficiency, according to Conrado Rios Gallardo, former Chilean Secretary of State, who was a recent visitor to the United States before becoming his country's ambassador to Peru.

With the elimination of waste and the use of labor-saving machinery, a marked decrease, he said, has been made in the cost of producing the fertilizer under the difficult conditions found in the arid desert.

"Never before has the nitrate industry occupied as strong a position as it does today," declared Ambassador Gallardo. "Not only have the mechanical processes been vastly improved, but the production has been stabilized to the benefit of both the producers and the consumers of this fertilizer."

The Chilean Government has taken an energetic part in the improvement of the industry. It has aided the producers through legislative enactment and has encouraged new American processes for mining and refining the fertilizer. At present nearly one-half of the total capital invested in the industry is owned in the United States, pointed one of the Ambassadors. American farmers are also the largest users of Chilean nitrate, their consumption during the past five years averaging about 1,000,000 tons annually. The nitrate fertilizer was first shipped to this country in 1830. It has been used ever since, and today it occupies the honor of being the oldest of the commercial fertilizers.
