POLITICAL DECEPTION

(From The Durham Herald)

headquarters in Raleigh, there is ing out a letter to women of the which is about as rank a of deception as has been pulled in any state campaign, and N. C. surpassed only by the stuff that was sewered out in the 1928 presidental election campaign. The letter, which has been received in Durham, begins with this paragraph: am writing to try to enlist your influence as an active Christian worker and one who stands for church into the campaign. It is a is a saint and Bailey a devil in church matters. That is the only Simmons and Bailey? It would be interesting to see which has done ing mothers. most for his church. Regardless of what one may think of Bailey as a senator, he certainly will measure up equally as well as Simmons in matter of church service, and no doubt, his record for activity in church matters far exceeds that of the Senator. Bailey is an active member in the First Baptist church in Raleigh, and has a sister who heads a state organization of Baptist women. Bailey for years was editor of the Baptist publication in this State. His voice has been lifted more in the cause of religion than Simmons has been lifted in the cause of politics, long before Simmons was a convert to the political expediency of prohibition.

But, the letter becomes more humorous as it goes on: "I sincerely believe that it is the special business of the women of the State to stand by a man who has stood by them down through the years in the great battle against the liquor traffic." The writer of that letter would convey some interesting information if she would tell where Simmons was and what he was doing when Bailey was head of the anti-saloon league and going up and down the State preaching day and night for the cause of prohibition? Bailey was a pioneer in the prohibition movement in the State, and because of that work, made himself unpopular for many years, only being taken over by Simmons' organization when it was found to be good politics to espouse prohibition. And where was Simmons when the women were seeking the right of the ballot?

The concluding paragraph hopes "that the women of your county can hold a meeting and bind themselves together" for the Simmons cause! Wants to hogtie the women to the Simmons' band wagon. If we know anything about the independence of womanhood, they will resent this effort to tie them hand and foot to the Simmons' cause through any such chains as set out in the letter which contains the above quotations.

Might of Christianity

in the Resurrection The Easter Gospel, which we celebrate by our greatest religious festival, with its truth of Immortality and Resurrection, is the heart, center and life of Christianity. Paul prays that "I may know Christ and the power of His resurrection."

-Woman's Home Companion.

This great fact has ever been the propelling power of Christianity. Christ was comparatively unknown and was "despised and rejected of men," when He died upon the cross. But when He arose, triumphant over the powers of darkness, death and hell, declaring, "All power is given to me in heaven and on earth," and saying, "Lo, I am with you always!" then His weak and terrified little band of disciples felt themselves imbued with irresistible power.

And in the strength of the Resurrection, and of the leadership of the risen Christ, they carried the great message hither and thither, not to Judea alone, but to the farthest ends of the earth. Their hearts aflame with their mighty Gospel, no persecutions could chill their ardor; neither the jaws of lions, nor the nails of the cross, nor burning faggots of the stake, could silence their testimony.

Easter Ceremonies in Rome Have New Dignity

As though symbolical of the obliteration of old differences between church and state, flowers sent by the governor of Rome adorn the classic cross in the center of the Conseun where so many Christian murting suffered death prior to the advent of Emperor Constantine.

Good Friday observances in all the 400 churches of Rome thus take on a new impressiveness.

The most picturesque is the procession of penitence across Rome to the church of Santa Groce in Gerusalemme where relics of the Savior's passion are exhibited. Many members of the Roman nobility participate in the procession.

All the marchers carry small candles of yellow wax and chant in chorus the canticle, "Long Live the Cross," before entering the church to give homage to the relics of the true cross preserved there.

Easter Finery

Popular observances, superstitions and customs attend on the observance of Easter day. One of these is the donning of fresh and attractive attire; a custom originated in religious ceremonies and changing in form with the years until it now means merely a donning of holiday garments in honor of the happy day. The traditional Easter bonnet is no longer material for the annual joke since the line of demarcation between leaving off the winter hat and putting on the summer one is not regulated by Easter, as it used to be in grandma's day, but is now entirely a matter of style and milady's purse.

"An average crop of tobacco withdraws from the soil large quantities of all the elements of plant food," says an exchange. An ayerage herd of cows withdraws from the barn-loft large quantities of animal food, too. And a drove of hogs can do some pretty thorough withdrawing from a field of peanuts. But the more they all withdraw, the quicker and finer they grow. It's not the withdrawing that matters. All the bother is about being sure there's plenty provided to be withdrawn.

Indians Venerate the Stem

Among the North American Indians the tobacco pipe has a peculiar symbolic significance in connection with the superstitious rites and usages of the race, says Encyclopaedia Britannica. The peace pipe or medicine pipe is an object of profound veneration. Though the most ancient pipes had no stem, it is the stem only of the medicine pipe which the Indians venerate. The bowl of a medicine pipe has no importance, one or another bowl being used indifferently.

$2,000,000 for Shade Cloth

Processes have been worked out that triple the life of the shade cloth used by tobacco growers on their plant beds, says W. M. Jardine, former Secretary of Agriculture. He adds that the annual bill for shade cloth is over $2,000,000.

Communities Can Act

"Farmers will grow good cotton if they can sell it for more than poor cotton. Selling at flat prices is the commercial millstone. How farmers are to get more for producing the better cotton is the crucial question of cotton improvement. The individual cannot change the system, but communities of producers acting together can obtain better treatment."-O. F. Cook, Yearbook of Agriculture.

There Used to Be a Law

Tobacco growing was started in . England in the 16th century, but the New England colonies raised such a howl that in 1660 the growing of tobacco in England was prohibited by law. It was not until 1782, however, that England's tobacco crops were finally suppressed by armed force and heavy penaltiesand by that time the Revolution had separated the American colonies from England and everybody had forgotten the original reason for stopping tobacco cultivation. The legal restrictions, which extended to Scotland and Ireland, were not removed until 1910.

Stagnant water and sour soil are poison to a tobacco plant. Drainage is the first essential.

"Why on earth do you run around with June so much?" demands Nancy. "She's the most untrustworthy, deceitful creature I ever knew. Her whims and her moods get on my nerves. She's the most unpopular kid in school and yet you stick to her like grim death."

Ethel sighs. She doesn't know herself why she sticks to June. Certainly that young lady is difficult enougha creature of eternal changing moods and ideas-a malden of violent likes. and dislikes.

And why does she seek June's society in preference to Caroline's. Caroline, sunny-haired, unimaginative, quiet, precise, stands for quiet security. She has no moods. She is always the same. Hers is a quiet self-satisfied calm which brings peace to the lives of her more turbulent friends.

Yet Ethel's natural shrinking from her is a perfect case of intuition without reason. For ef her two friends, June is the one to be counted on the final analysis-and Caroline the one tobe avoided.

It is so very often the case that the girl characterized as moody, irritable and flighty has the true stuff in herwhile the calm phlegmatic bundle of self-satisfaction who wins praise and admiration—is not to be counted on in an emergency.

June you see is passing through a difficult phase.

Her opinions are of no value, but ing. her friendship is. Her very attitude shows that she is not seeking popularity-that her idea of a perfect existence does not necessitate her being the center of an admiring group of friends.

Now she makes enemies oftener than friends. Yet the friends she makes should trust her, for she is to be depended on.

While Caroline, calm, competent, sunnily smiling is on the way to make the one girl everybody loves. Now you know, no girl in the world can properly cared for by this concern. achieve that. She must either take a stand on one side or the other. (@ by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.)
