Brown's Chapel News

Despite bad weather a fair crowd heard Pastor Dailey's last sermon before going to conference. It is regrettable that the church failed by $50 paying its pastor's salary and more than that of paying its quota for the mission fund. Mr. Dailey and Mr. J. J. Perry were guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Durham for dinner that day. E. Amos Richardson of Alamance spent the week-end with his friends and former neighbor Mr. R. H. Lindley. The deaths of Mr. Jim Atwater and Mr. Jim Griffin are keenly felt. The memory of their kind and noble lives will long be cherished by many friends in this community. The League meeting will follow Sunday school on the fourth Sunday and we suggest that the men of the Sunday school will find it more profitable and helpful to remain for the League meeting than to go out and talk of matters that will not do much for the uplift of the community. The program contains much that will help them. It was mistake as printed that we Durhams would soon be on the milk route. It should have been that we hope to be within the year. Janius Durham has harvested 30 bushels of stock beats from a very small area and a fine lot of kafir corn sun flower seed, all which he is using to feed his flock of Barred Rock pullets, which are beginning to lay very satisfactorily. Mr. W. J. Durham has received a letter from his son Grover to the effect that he is improving.

ed on home court one afternoon last week between Sophomores and Seniors was very interesting indeed, the Seniors winning with just one score, the score being 23-24. The B. Y. P. U. of Moncure Baptist Church held its regular meeting on Sunday evening with a large member attending. The Adult Union had a very interesting discussion of the lesson for Nov. 9th which was not heard on this date because of a special program by the Intermediate Union. H. Fitchett. Every one is invited to attend these meetings each Sunday at 7 P. M. On each Wednesday at 7 P. M. prayer services are held at the Baptist church, Rev. T. Y. Seymore conducting. CURTAILING SOCIAL FUNCTIONS

(From Hamlets News-Messenger) President and Mrs. Hoover have decided to curtail some of the social functions at the White House this winter on account of the depression and unemployment situation. No doubt the President is about as glad the functions can be cut as he is sorry there is unemployment in the land. Too much glamour and glitter is not good, even for a President. If a President handles his job well while in office, and if he keeps his health along with it, he will have a long time afterward to enjoy functions of a social nature. The people generally will agree with the Hoovers. But the Hoovers are not the only ones who should economize. It is not the actual saving the President would make, but the example—or just the looks of things—that is being held up. Then there are the two schools of thought on the subject. One is that to spend money right and left keeps business good. The other is that sheer economy will serve to bring the people back to normalcy. There is still another idea being advanced which is extreme to say the least. It is that waste is the salvation of business. This kind of waste is brought about by mass production of products that "wear out" comparatively soon so people will have to buy more. And so there is a viewpoint for everybody. The President has his idea of it, which means that all the rest of us may have ours.

DOWN BOARDS; UP SCENERY

(From The Hamlet News-Messenger) A recent billboard decision of the Indiana Supreme Court is heralded as a blow to outdoor advertising interests. And rightly so. Much has been said against outdoor advertising, but less has been done. Now the Indiana court speaks in no uncertain terms. A portion of the decision is worthy of note. It says: "Under a liberalized construction of State and Federal Constitutions there is a trend in the modern decisions (which we approve) to foster, under the police power, an esthetic and cultural side of municipal development—to prevent a thing that offends the sight sense in the same manner as a thing that offends the senses of hearing and smelling." In the decision referred to, the court upheld the right of the city of Indianapolis to prohibit billboard erection and maintenance within 500 feet of any park, parkway or boulevard; it being in that case that the boulevard was a part of the park system of the city. The law is merely following the sentiment expressed by an indignant public concerning the despoilation of the landscape. The cry has been to put down the billboard and thus put up the scenery. But billboards, as a nuisance to the eye, soon will become on the same legal par as those nuisances offending the other senses. Billboards do not and can not carry advertising in the full meaning of the word. Billboards are a menace to public safety; first by obstructing the view; secondly by distracting the attention of motorists on their most important job of steering a motor car. Billboards are a mere screen for rubbish, and a protection to immorality and wrongdoing. Billboards make possible the exploitation of selfish interests and hence the exploitation of the public's right to enjoy the scenery. Billboards are in no sense artistic; they are neither the subject nor the product of art or esthetic realization. Billboards destroy the beauty-value of millions of dollars of taxpayers' money spent in highways. Billboards are a further nuisance because they carry in their train by equally supposed right the further menace of signs tacked on trees, fences, bridges and wherever else they should not be. Billboards are a growing injury to advertisers who use them; first because of an aroused public opinion against their use; secondly, because many persons are refusing to buy products mentioned on them. There is a place for advertising. There are, indeed, many places for advertising. But the out-of-doors is not the place. When a man gets rich he usually does the things the poor man thinks he would not want to do if he were rich.

EDITOR CLARENCE POE SAYS:

"When making payment on a note or bill with cash, let's always be sure to get a receipt for the amount paid and file it.

"2. Paying by check is always safest and best, especially in case of a bill that has been charged. By putting in the lower left-hand corner what the check is for, a complete receipt is the result. And let's be sure to put this information also on the stub."
