THURSDAY, MARCH 2, 1933

Saturday will be the last time the people will be given an opportunity to attend the inauguration of a President on March 4. And praise be for that. Lame-duck Congressmen, Senators and Presidents are not our idea of modern government.

Course On Marriage
 Guilford College has followed in the footsteps of Columbia and a number of other colleges and universities which are giving a course in marriage. While the course is an innovation, it nevertheless is not so foolish as it sounds.

Not every boy or girl who is preparing for the teaching profession will teach. Nor will others who are studying the various vocational courses engage in the profession for which they study. But practically every girl and boy will marry. So why shouldn't this all-important business—the business of making a go of marriage—be taught, if it can be, at college.
 But we have previously remarked along this line. We mention the matter again because the course has been added at one of our own North Carolina institutions. Results of the course will be watched with interest by two groups—one which thinks it a foolish idea of a too-modern world and are ready to say, "I told you so," and the other which is in doubt but hopes the experiment will succeed.

An Airplane Tragedy
 The tragic death of Bryan Sanborn and Evelyn Sanborn near here Monday afternoon was all the more exciting because of the nature of the accident. It was the first time a major crash in which lives were lost had occurred within the confines of Wilkes.

Finding of the charred bodies in the plane wreckage made the tragedy seem more horrible than it is to find two dead in an automobile wreck. It seemed sadder perhaps when it was realized that the young man and his sister, just 19 and 17 respectively, were the victims.

Airplanes have not yet been made safe—that is, iron-clad against accidents. Neither have automobiles. Neither have trains. Yet the latter have about reached the minimum number of accidents, human nature and the inclination to be careless and foolishly bold being considered.

The most recent statement we recall at the moment was to the effect that the number of people killed in airplane accidents is smaller proportionately than the number killed in automobile accidents. Yet to a majority of the people, the airplane still holds out an element of risk which they do not care to assume.

The tragedy here is one that all of us regret.

Result Of Bad Teeth
 The statement of Dr. Charles Mayo that of the untimely deaths, that is deaths occurring before sixty years of age, 46 per cent are traceable to the teeth and 41 per cent to the tonsils is one that should awaken the public to a realization of the dangers they are encountering when attention to the teeth and tonsils are delayed.

Chances are about fifty-fifty that a person who has neglected diseased teeth will not live to be sixty years old. There may not be any direct connection between the cause of death and defective teeth. The death certificate may show one cause when really the teeth caused the death.

A few years ago a survey was made and about twenty-two million children were found with dental defects, according to an editorial in the Twin-City Sentinel. Children are retarded in their school work by these defects.

This condition has been greatly improved in recent years. Twenty-two million children with dental defects has probably dwindled a couple of million. When people realize that there are little with death, it will show a further decrease.

The Golden Key
 In less than three weeks the city of Philadelphia developed more than $15,000,000 of new business. Maybe the golden key to the return of prosperity has been located by the Pennsylvanians. Anyway, here is what the Twin City Sentinel has to say about it:

"Has Philadelphia found a key that can be made to unlock the door to a revival of business and employment? Can the plan which brought about more than $15,000,000 of new business in that city in less than three weeks be followed on a national basis through the co-operation of other communities and thus revive business on tremendous scale?"

"The Renovize Philadelphia campaign was started by a council of forty of the leading men and women of that city, bankers, merchants, insurance men, labor leaders and directors of public utilities. A thousand trade, civic, community and religious organizations were induced to co-operate and seven thousand volunteer workers, grouped in teams, went out to canvass every residence and place of business in the city and its suburbs.

"Full-page advertisements cried out the message from every newspaper. Signs and posters appeared in every street car, taxicab, subway and elevated. Thousands of posters were placed in store windows by scouts. Flags flew from rooftops and doorways. Philadelphia was thoroughly saturated with the campaign.

"One newspaper after another appeared with columns of small classified advertisements placed by painters, carpenters, plumbers, roofers, plasterers, many of them small business concerns that had not heard the ring of the cash register in months. A heating contractor purchased twenty-five trucks, made each an individual repair unit, hired twenty-five mechanics, and went out after the small jobs that were inspired by the mass selling effort. . . . A carpenter and a painter, unemployed since last summer, made a canvass of their neighborhood. They had done this two months before with no results. This time they obtained enough work to keep them busy sixteen weeks. Merchants began replenishing their stocks.

"This is part of the story of how well the Renovize Philadelphia campaign worked. Philadelphia is a big city, but there is no reason why the plan would not work in smaller places."

GETTING ATTENTION
 A tired pilgrim once arrived in the up-to-date and perfectly self-satisfied city of Athens. He arrived on foot because he had no car-fare. His shoes were sadly worn and his clothing unkempt and covered with dust. One would say that these disadvantages were enough to disqualify him for success in a town so smart and critical. But he had other handicaps more fundamental. He was too short and thickest to be impressive; his eyes had a decided squint; altogether he was not at all the kind of a man who commands respect before a crowd.

The principal business of the clever gentlemen of that city was standing around the marketplace, there to "hear or to tell some new thing." They were the joke-makers and fashion-setters of their era. As for investing in a new religion—they had hundreds of religions, some new, some fairly new, some old, but all entirely unused. A fine appreciative atmosphere for the foreign visitor named Paul. Straight on he marched until he reached Mars Hill. A few of the clever ones gathered about. The critical moment had come. Paul must say something, and no matter what he said, it would be wrong. Suppose he had said: "Good morning, gentlemen. I have something new in the way of a religion which I'd like to explain." A boisterous laugh would have ended his talk.

But Paul knew the psychology of the crowd. "Men of Athens, I congratulate you on having so many fine religions. I've traveled about quite a bit and your assortment is larger and better than I have seen anywhere else. I noticed that you not only have altars erected to all the regular gods and goddesses; you even have one dedicated to the Unknown God.

"Let me tell you an interesting coincidence, gentlemen. This God whom you worship without knowing his name, is the very God whom I represent."
 Paul stopped short and voices called out demanding that he go on. It appears later in the narrative that after his talk was over "some mocked, and others said, 'We will hear thee again of this matter.'"
 It was not a complete victory such as his Master had achieved at Jacob's well; but the audience which had confronted Paul was hostile, and his initial success so cleverly won, that this story deserves a place beside that of Jesus. Together they help us to understand the great mystery—how a religion, originating in a despised province of a petty country, could carry around the world. It conquered not because there was any demand for another religion but because Jesus knew how, and taught his followers how, to translate a great spiritual conception into terms of practical self-concern.

Sunday School Lesson
 By CHARLES E. DURN

Jesus Shows His Power
 Lesson for March 5th. Mark 4:35-5:8. Golden Text: 2 Timothy 1:12.

The first part of our lesson is the dramatic episode of the tired Jesus asleep in a storm. We picture Him, spent in body and soul, sound asleep on a cushion in the stern of the little vessel, unaware of the raging elements, stricken disciples, unable to cope with the pounding waves, despite their expert seamanship. In vain are their valiant attempts to preserve the boat's balance. The water persists in coming in, thereby threatening to swamp the shallop, and drown them all. Hastily awakening Jesus, they appeal, in terror, for His aid. "Master," they cry, "does it make no difference to you that we are sinking?" Rousing Himself, He rebukes the wind. "Silence!" is His command. "Be still!" The wind dies. It is calm.

Then follows the most significant touch in this exciting incident, that striking question, so characteristic of the Master, "Why are you afraid? Have you still no faith?" An eminent New Testament scholar holds that the entire gospel is contained within the words, "Fear not, only believe!" Jesus had an excess of faith in God. He was never afraid, because He was perfectly sure He was safe in the hands of God. How much our groping, confused, fearful, be-devilled generation needs to cast itself upon the merciful care of the Lord!

The second half of the lesson is the familiar story of the violent lunatic whom no fetters could bind. Living in a graveyard, wandering about in the hills, he was the terror of the neighborhood. Mark gives us a fuller description of this maniac than Matthew or Luke. His graphic pen vividly portrays the wildness of this miserable, untamed creature who, in his paroxysms, cut himself with stones, and smote the air with blood-curdling shrieks.

Mad as he was, however, he recognized, by some strange, inner compulsion, the authority of Jesus, and ran and worshiped Him. At once the Master expelled the foul spirits within the poor wretch, transferring them to a herd of swine. It was a spectacular demonstration of His dynamic power, a power pregnant today in the lives of His heroic followers.

BY THE WAYSIDE
 By S. B. F.

March is with us again, bringing its message of bud, upspringing, bloom, and silver sounds from the wild birds song.

How the wind blows! This is March! Those of us who do not fear the March wind, and do venture into it come to the sweet consciousness that these are the days when roses are in the making. Roses on the cheeks as well as in the garden. And how our blood does tingle! There is health, joy and beauty in these rollicking March days, if we look for them in the only place we can ever find them, especially health. . . . in God's great out-of-doors!

These blustery March days are doing more than that. All winter long the roses and other flowers, as well as the trees and shrubs have been curled up asleep. Asleep, and yet all the time nature was snuggling them down and putting something into the hearts of them all, a mysterious something which you and I never can understand, but which will in a few weeks or the next month give them life and power to lift up their heads again and walk forth in newness of life for another year.

Deeper down too, nature is working that wonderful art of hers in soil and root of plant and spring comes because winter has crumbled it in her cold fingers and something sweeter than any elixir man can ever make will begin to run through root, fiber and branch, bringing with it bud and flower, leaf and ripened fruit.

March with all its roughness and bluster is not half bad, for every blast means more roses and other blossoms to bring brightness and joy to lonely hearts.

The Family DOCTOR
 By John Joseph Gains, M. D.

"PLEURISY"
 Here is a disease of the winter months, Pleurisy, usually resulting from exposure to violent cold. It should not be mistaken for pneumonia, so, you better have the doctor and be sure you are right.

Pleurisy announces itself by PAIN. Not necessarily much fever, unless it begins with a pronounced chill. Remember, pleurisy is outside of the lung; pneumonia inside. The pleura is a tough, smooth membrane that lines the chest-wall—and also covers the body of the lung. If the membrane is normal, it will glide over its neighboring surfaces without sensation; inflamed, it at once becomes very painful. A cough, if any, is excruciating—it hurts to take a full breath—hurts at the point inflamed. If the spot remains sore long enough, adhesions may form, which starts a very chronic condition, hard to cure.

I have many times taken out from three to twelve pints of dropsical fluid from an old case of neglected pleurisy—pleurisy with effusion. It should never be permitted to get that far.

Your duty when attacked is, to go to bed, or, at least stay in the house where the air is dry and warm. Get up a sweat as quickly as possible. See that the bowel is "open." Get the blood to the surface and keep it there—it is possible only in warm atmosphere. Pneumonia may be mistaken for pleurisy—a dangerous mistake. See your doctor, and take no chances. Simple pleurisy is not dangerous if promptly attended to; pneumonia may be deadly neglected.

The real name of pleurisy is "pleuritis." But I am inclined to use plain, understandable language for my readers. I hope this short sketch concerning a common complaint, may do good somewhere.

Mellon Is Sued For Aiding Tax Dodgers

Washington, Feb. 27.—Andrew W. Mellon, ambassador to Great Britain and former secretary of the treasury, and two former officials of the internal revenue bureau today were named defendants in a $220,000,000 suit charging alleged connivance with officers of foreign steamship companies to evade just income taxes.

Named with Mellon were David H. Blair, one-time commissioner of internal revenue, and Alexander W. Gregg, former acting general counsel of the bureau.
 The suit was filed in the District of Columbia Supreme court by David A. Olson, and charge that Mr. Mellon not only failed to collect $100,000,000 in delinquent taxes from foreign steamship interests but placed the government in such a position that it was compelled to refund some $10,000,000 to the companies. The identities of the companies were not disclosed in the suit.

Create Credit Pool

Washington, Feb. 18.—Aiding in a campaign to "renovate Washington" and stimulate employment and business activity, District of Columbia bankers today created a $600,000 credit pool to be loaned for repairing and redecorating capital homes.

FOSTER FINDS PARTY LEADERS OPTIMISTIC

(Greensboro News, Tuesday, Feb. 28)

Back in his office from an official visit of several days in Washington, W. H. Foster, secretary-treasurer of the Republican state executive committee, yesterday commented on "the optimism prevailing at Republican national headquarters."

While in Washington Mr. Foster conferred with party officials at Republican national headquarters and he found "every indication of determination to prepare for successful campaigns in 1934 and 1936." Leaders of the party are organizing to that end, he said, "refusing to be discouraged by the results of the election of last November and determined to achieve substantial successes in the future."
 Mr. Foster visited a number of departments of the federal government.

NEGRO SAYS HE WAS PAID TO KILL MAN

Durham, Feb. 27.—Following a confession by a negro, Theodore Cooper, W. H. Hesse, local furniture dealer, had paid him $200 to shoot J. N. Lassiter to death here Saturday night, the two were jailed here today.

The negro was reported to have told a coroner's jury that Hesse was the beneficiary of a $15,000 life insurance policy on Lassiter, which had been assigned him as collateral for a loan he made to the deceased.
 The negro claimed that another negro also hired by Hesse fired the shot that killed Lassiter.

Trial Offer At Druggists' On New Mouth-Wash That Saves Half the Usual Costs

It's the year's big news for millions of people who use a mouthwash—a new antiseptic by makers of Vicks VapoRub—which does everything that any mouth-wash or gargle can and should do—at half the cost!
 So that people everywhere could prove for themselves the quality and amazing economy of Vicks Vorozone—five million trial bottles were supplied to druggists below cost . . . a 25c value for 10c! The demand, however, has been enormous and many druggists report that their stocks are exhausted. If your own druggist's supply has gone, do not hesitate to get the regular 10-ounce size of Vicks Anti-septic. It is an even bigger bargain.
 Furthermore, every bottle is sold with this positive guarantee. If, after a week's trial, you are not delighted with the quality and the economy of Vicks Antiseptic, return the unused portion and get your money back.
 You can use Vicks Antiseptic in your usual way for all your customary uses . . . to counteract bad breath . . . as a daily mouth-wash or gargle.
 In addition, Vicks Antiseptic has this unique advantage over other quality antiseptics. Born in a depression year, it is priced accordingly . . . big 10-ounce bottle . . . a usual 75c value . . . for only 35c.
