

Guilford College Inaugurates Complete Course In Marriage

Judged Academic Study Offered Sophomore Class

Guilford College.—The colonial college has always been known as a favorite haunt of the "campus" which occupies so large a place in the life of many colleges, has practically been an established institution; Guilford College goes a step further and is offering its regular classroom course on marriage, with a text-book, examinations, that is necessary to make a fledged academic study. The marriage course, which began this week, is given to all Guilford students during their second year of college. It is presented by Mrs. Catherine C. Milner, director of the school and professor of psychology, as a part of the orientation course required of all sophomores. In addition to the five-week study of marriage in the family, the orientation course includes a study of heredity and of the relation of the individual to his social environment. The course was given at Guilford College for the first time last spring, and this year has an enrollment of nearly 80 students.

Discussing the marriage course, Mrs. Milner pointed out that life is becoming one of the important objectives of a liberal arts college. There is an increasing awareness among students of the fact that such training should be given in college. Statistics show that the divorce rate for marriage between college mates is one out of 45 to 60 as compared to the average for the country of 1 out of 7. Mrs. Milner attributed this to the fact that in co-educational colleges men and women are living under similar environmental conditions, that it is comparatively easy to discover what members of the opposite sex have in common interests.

Importance of Training.—Mrs. Milner emphasized the importance of giving training in marriage to every college student. "No type of training is more greatly needed in college," she averred, "for a few students may actually take up the life work for which they are preparing themselves in college, and nearly all of them will eventually assume the responsibilities of marriage and family life." She referred to a statement by the director of the Hampton Betterment Foundation of Virginia, Calif., who said: "The importance of successful marriage and parenthood, personal, socially and racially, would require that all educational institutions place these subjects to no other in outlining preparation of every student."

Mrs. Milner brought out the fact that training for marriage and family life was represented at Columbia University as one of the eight major branches of a liberal arts education.

The works of two North Carolina comprise a large part of the bibliography for the marriage course, which is being presented through the use of a syllabus rather than of one text-book. In keeping with the objective of the Guilford College curriculum, "Personality and Social Adjustment," and "Wholesome Marriage," by Dr. E. R. Groves, of the University of North Carolina, and "A Study of 250 Successful Families," by Mrs. Chase

Gems Of Thought

The Christian Technique

It is the peculiarly Christian technique in the presence of pain and suffering to appropriate it as a privilege of intimacy with the Crucified. This is a new note in the art of living. Of old there had been those whose wisdom on the subject might be summed up in the phrase: avoid it. Then there had come the Stoics who inculcated the Spartan maxim: bear it with impassivity, having achieved a training in fortitude and indifference whereby its evil could be deflected. Later we are told to deny the reality of pain and suffering. These three methods all exist side by side in society today. All rest under the same criticism that pain and suffering cannot by any such method be made fruitful—whether by dodging, bearing or denying it. In all three several ways of dealing with suffering and pain there is a common note: the uselessness, fruitlessness, and pointlessness of it. The Christian has been shown a better way.

That more excellent way learned at the Cross is the way of meeting, overcoming, and transforming suffering and sorrow and pain. Not even the evils and ills of life are outside the grasp of the great Artist in living. Surely to utilize them is the best method of dealing with the recalcitrant obstacles that beset our journey through life. As our Lord did, so followed His saints—afar off. The suffering was neither avoided, nor merely accepted, for less was it repudiated or denied as non-existent. It was met, submitted to, and made useful in the atoning work of redemption.

Chinese and Japs Want Reduction in Arms Prices

London.—Members of the House of Commons roared with laughter tonight when a member, Morgan Jones, related a story which he said occurred at a British arms factory recently. The factory was making munitions for Japan in one section of its grounds and for China in another. Jones related. The Japanese and Chinese representatives happened to arrive at the factory the same day. Instead of voicing hostility they began, he said, earnestly to discuss the profits the manufacturer was making off their orders and finally issued a joint ultimatum to the factory to reduce the prices.

Two Held And Two Set Free On Liquor Charge

Hampton, who live in Newcastle township, were bound over to court under bond of $500 each when given a hearing Monday before Commissioner J. W. Dula on a charge of manufacturing liquor. Paul Armstrong and Lee Armstrong indicted along with them on the same charge were set free. All of them are colored men.

Going Woodhouse, of the faculty of Woman's College in Greensboro, are the principal references used in the class.

The course begins with a psychological approach to marriage and family life and deals with the various personality problems that make for marital unhappiness. Other main divisions of the study are the economic factors and the social factors affecting marriage, and the influence of moral and religious ideals upon marriage and the family.

QUITS REPORTING

Washington, Feb. 27.—After 26 years, H. E. C. Bryant will cease, of his own accord, to be a member of the press gallery. Mr. Bryant told his colleagues in the gallery that he expected to devote his time and attention in the future to fox hunting, "and other activities."

The chances are that the "other activities" tells the story. Mr. Bryant has doubtless formed a connection outside the newspaper business. He has represented the News and Observer and other papers, and is a member of the Gridiron club.

Lincoln Heights Play Is Success

Given Before Lenoir Audience Monday Night; Honor Roll Announced

The Lincoln Heights High School Dramatic Club received great acclaim last Monday night when they presented "Blundering Billy," a three act comedy, at the Freedman High School in Lenoir. This play had been presented at the home school 2 weeks before, and the players were able to give of their best in this second rendition. They played to a packed house whose hearty applause and loud peals of laughter manifested the manner in which they were enjoying this night of entertainment. Principal W. Burt Harper, who personally directed the play, states that the cast far exceeded his expectations of them in this presentation on a foreign stage. The audience was gripped throughout by the swift moving action, and marveled at the manner in which the cast portrayed the various roles. Compliments to both principal and cast ran high at the close of the play. On Friday night of March 3rd the play is being presented at the Housontonville high school. The well selected cast which made the success of this phase of school work possible is as follows:

The Taylorville five scored a 26 to 17 victory over the Wilkesboro quint in a game at Taylorville Monday evening. The game was not on the Wilkesboro schedule and was probably the last inter-high school game of the season.

While losing a number of games, Coach R. V. Day's boys had a very successful season and are to be commended for the fine sportsmanship they showed throughout the year.
