The Most Beautiful Valley
(Charlotte Observer, June 30)
The Observer is interested in a recent speech by the Archbishop of York, in which he claimed, as reported in London Answers, that "the most beautiful valley in the Lake District, and therefore "the most beautiful valley in the world," is that containing the famous Buttermere, in the Cumberland. The occasion for this tribute was called forth by reason of the fact that this valley has been put on the market. And now the question arises as to the extent of Archbishop's knowledge of beautiful valleys of the world. We may assume that he has never visited America, or at least that part of our country known as the South. If, for instance, the Archbishop had visited North Carolina and had traveled the extent of the Happy Valley, through which the Yadkin ripples its way from Patterson to the Wilkesboros, he might have thought twice before giving the laurels to the Cumberland. Or, what would have been his exclamations on a trip from Black Mountain to Asheville, through the heart of the Swannanoa Valley? Then there's Cashiers Valley, 4,000 feet up in the air, and the wonderful Hiwassee Valley from Murphy to Hayesville, and the Valley of the Tuckasee from Sylva to Bryson City—why, the Archbishop could have seen dozens of valleys in the North Carolina mountains admittedly more beautiful than the spot in the Cumberland.

We would not be inclined, however, to overwhelm him. We would be perfectly content, as a measure of moving him to change his classification, to take him on a trip through the famed Happy Valley we have mentioned. When "authorities" are moved to talk about the "most beautiful" things in the world, they should be careful to first take North Carolina into account.

In this family there was a large number of small children. Little Willie, age six, was taken in one morning to see his father, who happened to be laid up with influenza. Little Willie was quiet, almost reverent, in the sickroom. When it was time for him to go, he went up to his father's bedside and said: "I bin good, ain't I, pop?" "Yes, son," the old man whispered. "Well, then, kin' I see the baby!"

Operate Gold Mine In Surry County

Miners Hope To Receive Profitable Returns From Mine Near Elkin

With over $1,000 worth of mining machinery already installed, active operation of a gold mine located six miles north of Elkin on the south prong of Mitchell's River is to get under way this week, it was learned Wednesday from W. M. Dickerson, who with his partner, J. W. Brookshire, have leased the land upon which the mine is located and who will operate it.

According to Mr. Dickerson, ore from the mine has assayed from $1.10 to $47.64 per ton. He stated that it can be profitably operated upon a $3.00 per ton yield.

The mine is what is known as a placer mine, the ore first being crushed and then washed for gold deposits. Mr. Dickerson stated that although he could not say in what quantities gold would be found, every indication pointed to a profitable yield.

The land upon which the mine is located was leased from E. B. Hudson, Julie Marshall and D. A.

YET TIME TO PLANT NEEDED FEED CROPS

Since the drought in the middle west has greatly reduced the amount of hay and feed crops, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has authorized the growth of such crops on all land withdrawn from the production of basic crops under reduction contracts.

There is yet time to plant soybeans, sorghum, corn, Sudan grass, german millet, and a few other similar crops, it was pointed out by Dean I. O. Schaub at State College.

The amount of fertilization needed will vary with the type and condition of the soil and the kind of crop planted, but he advised growers to fertilize sufficiently to produce good crops. County agents can advise individual farmers what fertilization is necessary.

With the curtailment of the feed crops out west, he said, any North Carolina grower who buys his feed will have to pay exorbitantly high prices. Under the circumstances, all farmers should produce enough feed for their own livestock.

Land rented to the secretary of agriculture may be used for the production of such feed and forage crops for home use, and the farmers may grow such crops for sale on the non-rented acres.

The corn-hog contracts, however, do not permit the harvesting of as many feed crops as do the other contracts from acres rented to the secretary. Among seed which may not be harvested under this contract are: Soybeans, field peas, cow peas, peanuts, and sorghums.

These crops may be grown, however, if the farmers plan to plow them under for soil improvement purposes. Feed crops which may be harvested from corn-hog rented acres are: timothy, red top, orchard grass, blue grass, meadow fescue, brome grass, crested wheat grass, clover, alfalfa, sweet clover, lespedeza, and similar pasture and meadow crops.

Inventor Works on 'Death Beam' Which May End Wars

New York, July 10.—Nikola Tesla, electrical wizard and inventor with some 700 patents to his credit, observed his 78th birthday anniversary today by announcing he is producing a "death beam" which will end war.

Tesla's invention, which he says will take several more years to perfect, will "wipe out armies in a flash and destroy fleets of both ships and airplanes," he said.

The inventor said he hoped to live long enough to perfect the "death beam" so that he may present it to the nations of the world as an instrument of international peace.

"If all the cities of the world," he said, "were absolutely fortified against attack, it would end war. Under my theory every large city of the world would be equipped with a power plant to create electric beams of such tremendous energy that they could form an invisible and impregnable wall over and around the city."

"Such beams would make it impossible for an airplane to drop bombs or for an army to invade the city."

"Placed 300 miles apart along the entire coast of the United States, the nation could be absolutely protected against invasion."

Tesla said he already has perfected machines capable of producing the rays and that, in a relatively small plant he can amplify and magnify the strength of electricity currents.

WILL STORE SPUDS FOR LATE MARKET

The possibility of increased demand for small potatoes later in the year has brought out a need for proper storage facilities.

Due to current low prices, growers in the eastern part of the State have agreed not to market before July 4 any potato smaller than one and seven-eighths inch in diameter.

The drought condition in the middle west may reduce the crop enough to create a considerable demand for North Carolina potatoes later in the year, including the smaller spuds, said M. E. Gardner, professor of horticulture at State College.

Cold storage, of course, would be the best way of preserving the potatoes, he said, since humidity and temperature could be regulated as desired. However, most growers will have to use other facilities.

To get the best results, he suggested the following:

Store only in cool, dry places. Do not store potatoes which have been cut or bruised while digging. Protect them from strong light and the direct rays of the sun—this is important, he said, since potatoes exposed to light become green and unfit for food.

Store the potatoes in barrels or baskets and in such a manner that the air may circulate freely among them at all times. Protected sheds, barns, sweet potato storage houses, tobacco barns, or similar buildings not being used for other purposes will make suitable storage places for the spuds.

Lenoir, July 9.—Anthrax, most deadly of cattle diseases, has struck two dairy farms near Lenoir, and today local health authorities summoned from Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus aid in preventing its spread.

Nine cows, six of them milk producers and three of them calves, have died. Claude Prestwood, manager of one dairy which has become infected, is being treated with anti-anthrax toxin following a critical illness which developed late yesterday. He is expected to recover.

Dr. William Moore, state veterinarian, and Dr. N. B. Tyler, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, arrived here in mid-afternoon and will make a preliminary survey. They will return Wednesday to administer vaccines to approximately 175 dairy cows.

"Although the situation is serious," said Dr. Moore. "I think the local board of health has taken all precautions necessary."
