Jenkinsville, S. C., Aug. 18—Strange pranks were played by a bolt of lightning during a thunder storm here recently.

First it struck a tree and snapped off the head of a snake hidden in a knot hole.

Then it jumped eight feet to a parked automobile and tore two holes in the top.

Still unspent, the bolt plowed a furrow in the earth about 10 feet long and showered loose dirt on the top of a huge 30 feet away.

After the storm the snake's head was found beside the house; its body was still in the tree.

Fowls Lose Health As Production Is Pushed

The evolution of the fowl from a jungle bird laying 15 eggs a year to the modern hen laying up to 300 eggs in the same period is a monument to poultry science, says R. S. Dearstyne, head of the State college poultry department.

The fowl has been transformed from a partially herbivorous bird to one which will utilize quantities of animal protein in egg manufacture. The birds' bodies have probably changed in adapting themselves to the new diet, he said.

Unfortunately, however, the tendency of the industry has been to stress increased production without taking sufficient consideration of fowl vitality.

The question of mortality is now a major concern of the industry and much thought and investigation must be spent before the problem can be solved, Dearstyne stated. The problem is complex, as there are so many reasons for birds dying early.

A recent study by O. B. Taylor of the poultry department into the causes of death in 4,440 fowls showed deaths were caused by the following conditions in the percentages listed: diseases of the digestive tract 15.9 per cent; intestinal parasites, 11.6 per cent; respiratory diseases, 9 per cent; tumors, 8.4 per cent; germ borne diseases, 7 per cent; diseases of the glandular organs, 6.9 per cent; constitutional diseases, 6.5 per cent; genital diseases, 6.5 per cent; abdominal diseases, 5.4 per cent; protozoan diseases, 5.4 per cent; nervous diseases, 4 per cent; accidental deaths, 3.6 per cent; diseases of the circulatory system, 1.3 per cent, and cutaneous diseases, .5 per cent.
