Dellaplaine News

ROARING RIVER, Route 1, Dec. 3.—Last rites for Mrs. Eleanor Mathis, 76, who died Thanksgiving day at the home of her daughter, Mrs. DeWitte Burchette, Ronda, following a stroke of paralysis last Monday, were held last Saturday morning at Cranberry church, Rev. N. T. Jarvis, life-long friend, preached from 1 Corinthians, 21: "All things are yours," the same scripture he used in the funeral sermon for her husband, Mr. John Mathis, more than 20 years ago. Rev. A. S. Mathis assisted. Mrs. Mathis' maiden name was also Mathis. Of her four children the three surviving ones are: Mr. Rona Mathis, West Virginia; Mrs. Nancy Hemric, Elkin; and Mrs. Julia Ann Burchette, Ronda. Mark Mathis, a great-nephew whom she brought up, also survives.

"Aunt El", as she was affectionately known wherever she lived, was a most beloved woman in this and all the surrounding communities. She often told how, when a little girl walking along the road, she wondered what she could be that was worth while, when she grew up and decided, "I'll be a real good woman." That "Aunt El" fulfilled her ambition, legions could testify. Of her characteristics the most outstanding was that she was uniquely cheerful and comforting. As Phillips Brooks said of his reason for preaching, "Aunt El" made people "willing to live another week."

Much moving around continues in this community and is said to be a note of prosperity. Last spring it was rumored that this entire community would move to Thurmond. But the people

Lady Says She Took
CARDUI for Cramps;
Was Soon Relieved

Women who suffer as she did will be interested in the experience of Mrs. Maude Crawford, of Belleville, Ill., who writes: "For several years, I suffered from irregular trouble and cramping. There would be days when I would have to stay in bed. I would get so nervous I was miserable. My aunt told me to try CARDUI. She believed it would build me up, regulate me and help the nervous trouble. I knew after taking half a bottle of CARDUI that I was better. I kept on taking CARDUI and found it was doing me a world of good. I am in good health, which means a lot to me. . . . Thousands of women testify CARDUI benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician. . . . Price $1.

Mr. J. T. Martin and sons, carpenters, who are building a house for Mr. and Mrs. Binkley, Mr. Martin's son-in-law and daughter, at Lewisville, a suburb of Winston-Salem, spent last week-end at their home at Ronda.

Miss Eulah Jarvis, of Winston-Salem, spent Thanksgiving with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Jarvis, of the Cranberry settlement.

Miss Della Myers is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Rob Segraves, of the Cranberry vicinity, who have a new baby.

Rev. and Mrs. N. T. Jarvis had as their guests Thanksgiving at their children except Mrs. Leona Mathis, of the Brier Creek vicinity, and Mrs. Nell Walker, of Randleman. Those coming were Mr. and Mrs. Dwight G. Jarvis and daughter, Sue, of Hickory; Mr. and Mrs. Jim P. Jarvis, and children, Jim, Jr., Jerry and Betty Jean, of Winston-Salem; and Miss Minnie Sue Jarvis, student nurse, of Statesville. Mrs. Lois Jarvis Roberts and sons, Jim Frank and Shirley, Jr., live with her parents, while Mr. and Mrs. Noah Jarvis, Jr., and little son, Gray, live nearby.

Until informed by Mr. J. E. Spainhour's history at the time of the fire sale, some people may not have known that the many Spainhour-Sydnor stores were founded at Dellaplaine in 1870 by the late R. A. Spainhour, who sold goods here two years. As he scribe has pointed out at great length and with considerable tedium, much has emanated from the miniature hamlet of Dellaplaine and the surrounding neighborhood. Old Oak Forest church at Dellaplaine is said to have once been the rural church most patronized by the "aristocracy" in the county, and numbered many famous divines among its pastors and preachers. The school "ten miles below the courthouse" was described in early history and through the nineties as one of the best in Wilkes. The number of judges, eminent lawyers, successful teachers, doctors, and naval captains going out from the school and community, in so isolated a district, has been surprising. It was also the home of Otto Wood.

When the late Mr. R. A. Spainhour operated a store at Dellaplaine in 1870-1872, he also taught school. One of his students was a poor, diffident, country boy, Julius Martin, nicknamed "Hoody," who is Wilkes' representative in the department of justice as one of the several special assistants-attorney-general. While exercising what he amusingly characterizes as his "lightning-like mind" at Dellaplaine, young Martin was badly hurt; and an older student, now Attorney J. F. Spainhour, of Morganton, brother of the teacher, carried him on his back a mile, or a mile and a half, home to the Gus Martin place, where J. S. Pardue lives. Mr. Martin at that time was a very poor and timid boy—even though of the somewhat fabulous "Yadkin river aristocracy" whose blood made indigo pink—and Mr. R. A. Spainhour was the only person who gave him any praise or encouragement.

Mrs. Laura Martin Linney has a hob-nail glass spoon-holder her mother, the late Mrs. Virginia Mastin, purchased from Mr. Spainhour at his store at Dellaplaine in 1870.

Morgenthau Reports On Offerings To His Chief; Sees Relief Program

Washington, Dec. 3.—Roosevelt's first birthday this week finds its yield to the treasury far below some official estimates and bootlegging still the government's biggest liquor law enforcement problem. The anniversary, Wednesday, also will see no change in the opinion of many that liquor prices are unreasonably high. The demand for a reduction in tax rates is strong. Administration officials are devoting study to paths toward lower prices. There have been indications that recommendations for lower liquor taxes to Congress may follow.

Repeal became effective early the evening of December 5, 1933, when Utah, the 36th state to take such action, approved the 21st amendment, which ended the famous 18th. The sale of wines and liquors became legal immediately in 29 states. Officials estimated today that by Wednesday evening the American people will have drunk, in the first repeal year, approximately 42,000,000 gallons of distilled spirits—7,000,000 of which came from abroad—and about 35,000,000 barrels of beer.

For 11 months, revenues were $329,465,000 in domestic excise tax plus $35,108,000 in import duties, a total of $364,573,000. Estimates for the full year now are about $350,000,000 in excise taxes, or some $120,000,000 less than officials originally predicted.

Due, both producers and distributors say, to high prices made necessary by taxes, production has run far ahead of consumption. Definite figures are not yet available but the expectation is the full year will record the distillation of about 100,000,000 gallons of hard liquor.

The result is enforced aging for 50,000,000 or more gallons with ensuing improvement in the quality of the liquor sold. The federal tax rate is now $2 a gallon. In addition, the states impose taxes ranging from 50 cents to $1. There are also heavy taxes, both state and national, upon the distiller and distributor.

Imported liquors must pay a customs duty of $5 a gallon and also are subject to the $2 excise tax.

Chairman Harrison, of the senate finance committee, is among those advocating a drop in the import duty. The administration may be able to bring this about through negotiations of reciprocal tariff treaties.

The bootlegger remains the biggest obstacle to liquor law enforcement but federal efforts to curb him during the past 11 months saw government agents seize 10,947 stills and the arrest of 21,622 persons. Approximately 7,500 were convicted.

A disturbing influence in the enforcement situation just now, however, is the fact that more than 800 agents are working without pay and may be separated from the service altogether.

A rider attached by Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, to the current appropriation bill for the treasury compelled all enforcement operatives in the liquor tax section to take a new competitive civil service examination.

Over 800 failed, while only 400 passed. Foreseeing a disorganized service until new operatives could be trained, Secretary Morgenthau asked the displaced men to serve without pay.

Ferguson News

FERGUSON, Dec. 5.—Another Thanksgiving has passed into history without anything unusual happening in our community. The usual sportsmen were in the field chasing rabbits and quite a few local people spent the holidays elsewhere, while there were also quite a number of visitors in our midst.

Our community continues to increase in population and not altogether by importing citizenship. Three new babies arrived in the homes of some of our citizens within the last week or so. Mr. and Mrs. Harley Sanders are the proud parents of a new boy, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Sanders are happy over the arrival of a baby girl, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fred Walsh are also doting over a new arrival in their home. This makes a very happy Thanksgiving for these parents.

Miss Clyde Cotner, teacher in holidays in Raleigh with her parents. Prof. C. M. Dickson, principal of the Ferguson school, spent the day with his family, including Miss Casey, Mrs. Stokes, Mrs. Barlow and Mr. Earp, also spent the week-end at their respective homes.

W. H. Ferguson and family, of Richmond, visited his mother, Mrs. S. V. Ferguson, at North Wilkesboro and also visited relatives and friends at his old home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Wilson, of Greensboro, Vermont, stopped for a short visit with their aunt, Miss Janie Spicer, while on their way to Dazell, S. C., to visit Mrs. Wilson's parental home.

Quite a few real estate deals have been consummated in the last week, we are advised, in this section. Mr. Fred Walsh has sold his farm on Beaver Creek to Mr. W. C. Walsh and has purchased a home and farm near the farm of Mr. J. B. Walsh.
