

McCrary Says Farmers Ask Holler Be Retained As Wilkes Farm Agent

90 per cent of these farmers turned in an accurate farm record book. Not all as yet have worked into their rotations, but all do know that this is a requirement and that if they are to remain as demonstration farms they will have to meet this requirement.

Mr. W. J. Barker, Assistant Extension Forester, states that Wilkes County in 1938 did more timber stand improvement work than any other county in North Carolina, and figures show that we thinned 350 acres of wood-land, which included both pine and hardwoods.

Since December 1, 1937, Wilkes county has secured, mainly through the effort of Extension Workers, a new Apple Research Laboratory, with a full time research specialist in charge. Mr. Carl E. VanDeman is a native of New York and a graduate of Cornell University. He has been working in the county for the past two years and his research work is leading the way to a more scientific and profitable method of orchard improvement. Work conducted by Mr. VanDeman includes work on the control of the codling moth, control of apple scab, the testing of commercial sprays, and the introduction of new cover crops to be grown both in the summer and winter.

Through the co-operation of Mr. VanDeman and Extension workers, a complete mailing list of all fruit growers in this county has been made and timely information on spraying, marketing, and cultural practices have been passed on to these growers. Meetings and demonstrations have been conducted jointly throughout the fruit growing sections of Wilkes county. The approval made by the Legislature in 1937 represents the first direct appropriation for research work in North Carolina. Since that time appropriations have been made for a number of other farm crops. We would like to have it clearly pointed out that for a number of years the Fruit Growers of Wilkes and Alexander counties, along with the Extension workers, have been working and planning for apple research work here in the Brushy Mountains prior to 1937.

Through the effort of Extension Workers, in February, 1938, Wilkes county was provided with a full time Home Demonstration Agent. Prior to this date, Wilkes County had, upon one or two occasions, had a Home Agent to work part time. With a Home Demonstration Agent at work the Extension program was more balanced than it had ever been at any time prior to December 1, 1937.

Miss Harriet Goggan, who was appointed Home Demonstration Agent in February 1938, has organized clubs in 11 different communities in the county. She has brought to the county specialists in all the fields pertaining to Home Making, marketing of farm products. A curb market has been established for the Home Demonstration Club members of Wilkes county, and last year a total sales of $1,282.46 was made. Definitely scheduled monthly meetings are held in all 11 of the communities throughout the county.

Prior to December 1, 1937 a total of $600.00 was offered as prizes in the local county fair. In February 1938, the fair catalog was completely revised and brought up to date a total of $1,300.00 was offered in prizes for 1938. $100.00 was offered as the first prize for the best commercial orchard exhibit. This prize was even better than that offered by the State Fair. A total of $500.00 was offered for apples alone. Rules, regulations and factors considered in judging all exhibits were included in the fair catalog. Superintendents and others aiding with Fair Exhibits were appointed and were paid for their services. In 1938, there were five commercial apple exhibits which was approximately four times larger than that shown in 1937. In 1939 there were 10 commercial apple exhibits, along with single trays, plates and other small exhibits. Prizes were offered in 1939 for fruit and other exhibits were even more than in 1938. The apple show was at least twice as large as that of the State Fair.

Through special efforts of the Extension workers, Wilkes county has been included in the Tri-Creek Soil Conservation District, and at present we have four full time employees of that service working for farmers in this county. Also included with the Soil Conservation Service is the services of the CCC Camp in Surry County. Already, these boys are doing Soil Erosion Control work in the lower and eastern part of Wilkes County. This service to the farmers of Wilkes County is a direct result of Extension work since December 1, 1937. Within the next year these people will reach approximately 200 farmers in the county.

PASSES MILLION

More than a million farms are now included in soil conservation districts organized during the past two years by farmers, with 400,000 more expected to come in shortly.

CALVES

Robert Morgan and Leonard McKinnay of Lillington, Route 1, and Willis Temple, Bunnlevel, Route 1, are three of the Harnett County 4-H Club boys conducting baby beef calf projects this year.

EXTENSION

Through the Extension Service program, more farmers of Wilkes county will be taught the necessity of raising more food and feed crops at home this year, says Farm Agent J. O. Anthony.

85,072 Needy in Schools To Have Lunch Provided

With eight counties missing from the list, a total of 1078 school lunch rooms in North Carolina had been approved through the last of January to assist them in preparing free lunches for 85,072 undernourished children, A. E. Langston, State director of commodity distribution for the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare, said this week.

Maximum number reached by the program last year was 843 schools in which 48,893 undernourished public school pupils were aided with surplus commodity lunches. Counties without certified schools on Jan. 31 were: Alleghany, Davidson, Johnston, Lincoln, New Hanover, Person, Yadkin and Yancey.

Eleven counties represented by Alamance, Alexander, Anson, Camden, Chowan, Greene, Madison, Onslow, Perquimans, Stanly, and Washington had only a small percentage of the schools and needy children certified, Langston said.

Delivery of approximately 1,100,000 pounds of apples, butter, flour, raisins, cereal, peas, and corn meal during February to the schools in the 92 certified counties would be necessary to sustain the program, the director estimated.

Extent of increase in the program he pointed out by comparing the estimated February delivery with the total supply of 1,469,666 pounds of food delivered to 843 certified lunch rooms during the entire previous school year.

Langston estimated that before the close of the current school year about 1400 schools will have been certified for commodities to assist in giving free lunches to approximately 105,000 undernourished children.

ENROLLMENT

Approximately 225 girls and 200 boys are enrolled in the eleven 4-H Clubs in Cleveland county and are now making plans for the project work they will conduct this year.

Deaf Over Year, Woman Can Hear

Grafton, W. Va., Feb. 13.—Totally deaf for 18 months, 18-year-old Eloise Lockard fainting with joy last night when her hearing suddenly and unaccountably returned.

Miss Lockard's father, Police Captain A. E. Lockard, told today how the family was spending a quiet evening at home, with Eloise keeping abreast of the conversation by lip reading.

Suddenly she asked a brother: "What did you say? I believe I heard you."

He repeated the statement and Eloise collapsed. Just to prove the experience was no myth, she called her father on the telephone today and said she heard him perfectly.

Miss Lockard's deafness began during her junior year in Grafton high school, but specialists said they could not help her because nerves in her ears had been paralyzed. She returned to school and was graduated last June despite the handicap.

Physicians who examined the girl today were unable to explain why her hearing was suddenly restored.

EASY

The young couple sat at a night club table and cooed heavily.

"We could get married easily," whispered the boy. "My father's a minister."

"Okay," returned the girl promptly. "Let's try it. My father's a lawyer."
